Exit, One Turk
Grand Monarch Cheerful
Billion, Number One
Gold in the Kalahari

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

AHMED OSMAN, executed in the Massachusetts electric chair on Tuesday, was the first Turkish citizen, and the first Mohammedan, ever executed in Massachusetts. He spent his last hours going through the ritual of his religion, although Mohammed never made special provision for an electric chair, electricity being unknown in his day.

The prison offered him his choice of three assorted clergymen to accompany him to the death chair, two Christian, the third not. But they could offer him no Mohammedan comforter, so he refused and went alone. Two thousand volts of electricity, applied three times, perhaps made him realize that there are conditions ahead of us not dreamed of by Mohammed.

If you are not prejudiced against high-sounding titles, supposed to have been abandoned in this country when we broke away from England and royalty, you will be interested to know that Mr. Sieber, of Akron, O., "Grand Monarch of the Mystic Order of the Enchanted Realm of the United States and Canada," inspecting his various "grottoes" throughout the country, finds cheerfulness and a better feeling everywhere.

It will please the conservative, and alarm the ultra-radical, to hear from Mr. Sieber that paternalism, well-represented by his grottoes, will "do more than any other single factor to stifle the growth of Communism."

The government announces the sale of the first billion of 1934 bonds. Nine or ten other billions will come later. Half the billion will pay 2½ per cent interest; the other half, 1½ per cent. Financial concerns now lending money of call at less than one per cent will gladly buy the bonds, and naturally, as they can get from the government the money to buy the government's own bonds, and then get interest, an amusing "ring around a rosy."

The second, third, fourth, fifth, etc., billions will perhaps not be so easy to sell. There is a limit even to imaginary money, since the government must print the money that will pay for the work to be done under its program. Why, in Heaven's name, not print the money and pay it out and redeem it, as the bonds will be redeemed, and save interest payments. Before the government finishes with retiring "refinancing" and new bond issues, the interest will amount to more than the total ten or twelve billions spent and needlessly borrowed.

You may be tired of this matter, but if you are a taxpayer, you will be more tired of paying interest before you get through with it.

Sir Malcolm Campbell, holding the world's automobile speed record of 300 miles an hour, and Sir Alan Cobham, one of the best English fliers, are off to the Kalahari Desert in Africa, to hunt for a rich gold reef, supposed to have been located there. They will look for the gold reef from the air, flying low, and the idea may not be such a bad one. Flying over a new California oil region with Mr. Kingsbury, president of Standard Oil of California, this writer could see, after that had been pointed out, the "domes" under which oil is found, as plainly as you could see a cinnamon on a child's hand. The oil "dome" is not unlike a ring-worm.

As in days when Mr. Dooley described the Dreyfus affair in Paris, so now Frenchmen take an active interest in politics. Royalists, who are dead politically in France but don't know it, imagine, occasionally, that they ought to bring back one of their preposterous kings. On Tuesday they tore things up in the fashionable Faubourg St. Germain, and proved their royalist patriotism on the Boulevard St. Michael, better known as the "Boule Miche," by knocking over the stands of newsdealers and florists, soaking them with gasoline and setting them on fire. At the same time, five thousand Communists fought police on the Boulevard Montparnesse, and other small patriots were fighting late into the night around the Chamber of Deputies.

When a Frenchman contemplates the American passive acceptance of things as they are, he must be surprised.

As one dictator to another, Mussolini warns Hitler, "Don't step on the toes of Italy," referring to the rumor that Hitler intends to absorb what was left of Austria after the Versailles treaty got through with the Hapsburg empire. Mussolini's newspaper mouthpiece, Il Lavoro, warns Hitler that Italy will stand shoulder to shoulder with France if it comes to Germany swallowing up Austria.

This will shock Hitler, who must feel that all good dictators should stand together in their little ambitions.

TWO BANDITS KIDNAP AND ROB MAN

DEATH THREAT SENT MOTHER OF MISSING DORCHESTER GIRL

TWO BANDITS KIDNAP, ROB DEALER

Pair Beat a Merchant After Wild Ride in Charlestown

Two sweater-clad bandits, each armed, kidnaped Pascall Cohn, 40, of 16 Dorr st., Dorchester at the Fruit and Produce Exchange in Rutherford ave. Charlestown, today, rode him through the streets in his own car and then assaulted and robbed him.

Cohn was thrown out of the car at Bunker Hill and Elm sts., Charlestown, and from there was taken to Haymarket Relief Hospital by police to be treated for lacerations of his head, caused by the butt of a revolver.

TWO SEIZE AUTO

As he stepped into his car, one of the sweater-clad bandits stepped up and pressed a revolver into his side, ordering him to slide away from the wheel. Then the other front door opened and the second bandit entered with a revolver.

The first bandit took the wheel and with Cohn wedged between them, the bandits rode for more than a mile through Charlestown streets. At one point in the ride, Cohn, angered despite the guns, kicked his fot through the windshield.

One of the bandits punched him and threatened to "bump him off" if he put up any more fight.

Despite this threat, however, Cohn, a short time later, lashed out with a fist and shattered one of the sedan windows. This was at Bunker Hill and Elm sts. The bandit immediately stopped the car.

VICTIM CALLS POLICE

Cohn was pounded over the head with gun-butts and his money taken from him.

After he had been thrown out of the car and the bandits had driven off along Bunker Hill st., toward Chelsea, Cohn telephoned police of the Charlestown station.

A squad car was sent to the scene and the holdup victim, bleeding about the head, was taken to the hospital.

Gov. Ely will sail from New York next Saturday on a short vacation cruise to the West Indies. The Governor said he plans to be back at the State House about Feb. 8.

Meddling and Muddling U.S. 'Statesmen' Tie America to Europe, While Public Sleeps

This is the fourth of five articles by William Hillman, London representative and chief of staff of the European correspondents of the Hearst papers.

Mr. Hillman's articles, obtained from state documents or authoritative statements of foreign government officials, probably will give America a clearer insight into the attitude and objectives of the Washington administration than can be obtained from news sources here at home.

By WILLIAM HILLMAN

The United States has played a leading role in recent years in the new diplomacy of international intermeddling.

American statesmen have meddled and muddled in affairs of little direct and vital concern of the United States.

And spokesmen and "statesmen" of the present administration, like those of the preceding administration, are apparently determined to continue along the same dangerous path and to go even farther.

These American "statesmen" have intervened in important discussions, guided and misguided European action and opinion by promises which could not be fulfilled, and yet, afraid of public opinion at home, have refused to admit they have intervened.

G. O. P. Secretaries Follow Wilson

If Europe accuses the United States of promises which have not been kept, blame can be attributed to meddlesome, muddling American representatives, who defied American public opinion or lulled it to sleep by false representations.

The United States has consistently refused to join the League of Nations.

But with the Kellogg Pact, and with the Stimson interpretation of the pact, and with he recent elaboration of the Stimson doctrine by Norman Davis to abandon neutrality, we shall soon find ourselves in the same pew with the powers whose universalism we rejected despite the pleas of Woodrow Wilson and his followers.

President Wilson failed in his revolutionary step to have the United States join the League of Nations.

But two secretarys of state under Republican presidents who followed Wilson, attempted to bring us closer to the League.

DONNELLY 'FIX FUGITIVE' IS ARRAIGNED

Pleads "Not Guilty" to Eight Counts in Jury Cases

John J. Donnnelly, alleged jury-fixer, was held in $8000 in Superior Court today on eight indictments only a few hours after he had been arrested in an apartment in Commonwealth ave., Allston, ending a chase of four months.

The apartment is one of which Mrs. Helen Haggerty, a witness in the unsuccessful disbarment proceedings against Atty. Lowell A. Mayberry, testified she was being supported by Donnelly.

When the alleged jury fixer's wife, Mrs. Gertrude Donnelly of Rosmar pl., Roxbury, heard of his arrest, she declared:

"I hope he gets all that is coming to him."

She reiterated her charge, made at the disbarment hearing, that her husband was a jury fixer, and said:

"I'll tell the truth, as I did at the trial in Supreme Court."

Here, Miss Mary Donnelly, 20, one of the three children whom Mrs. Donnelly charges her husband with failing to support, said:

"I'm glad they caught him."

Mrs. Donnelly has brought a charge of non-support against Donnelly in Roxbury court, and he is wanted in that court for defaulting last October in this case.

PLEADS NOT GUILTY

Before Judge Cox in superior court, Donnelly pleaded not guilty to three indictments charging him with obstructing justice by offering gratuities to three jurors, pleaded not guilty to three more indictments charging him with corrupting jurors, and made the same plea to two indictments charging conspiracy to corrupt jurors.

In three indictments, he was named with Charles A. Murtaugh, arraigned last October and now out on bail, and in three others he was named with George F. Mahoney, still at large.

Donnelly was taken from his bed in the Commonwealth ave. apartment at an early hour by Police Inspectors Wilder L. Dillon and Martin P. Kelly.

FIRST VISIT SINCE QUIZ

Captive of Death Maniac

Lorraine A. Hewey, 15, of Freeman st., Dorchester, missing since Jan. 15, is held captive by the maniac who pinioned Ethel Zuckerman's body to the floor of a South End bakery. That was the information contained in a note received today by the girl's mother. "I killed the Zuckerman girl because I'm crazy, and I'll kill your child," said the note. Police launched one of the most extensive manhunts in Boston's history.

CHILD FACES FATE METED TO ETHEL ZUCKERMAN

"I Killed Her Because I'm Crazy," Writer Says; Big Hunt On

Lorraine Anita Hewey, a 15-year-old Dorchester high school student, who has been missing 10 days, is held captive by the fugitive slayer of Ethel Zuckerman—and is to be killed—according to a letter received by her mother today.

The letter purports to be from the unknown slayer of Miss Zuckerman, an 18-year-old South End girl, who was stabbed and beaten to death by a maniac in a Harrison ave. bakery on the night of Dec. 20.

"I'LL KILL HER"

Lending some credence to the claim and valid reason for the fear it instilled in official circles is the fact that the death note was mailed in the South End, at 1 o'clock this morning.

"I am going to kill your girl like I killed Ethel Zuckerman, because I am crazy," was one line of the message.

Because it came from the South End, because the Zuckerman slayer was a maniac and because the disappearance of Lorraine was not generally known, the letter resulted in a swift mobilization of police, by radio and teletype, for search of the South End district.

NO INTEREST IN BOYS

Lorraine is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leon N. Hewey of 24 Freeman st., Dorchester. She was in her last year at Grover Cleveland Junior High School, an attractive girl, a good student, homeloving and with no interest in boys, according to her mother.

Mrs. Hewey discounted the possibility that Lorraine had vanished of her own accord and herself wrote the letter.

"She would not and could not have done it," the mother said.

She denied there was any similarity between the writing in the threat and Lorraine's handwriting, samples of which police took for

2 WOMEN GIVE BREMER CLUES

St. Paul, Jan. 25 (AP)—Two unnamed eye witnesses, both women, who saw the kidnaping of Edward G. Bremer, when the wealthy St. Paul banker was seized Jan. 17 and spirited away, today supplied police with clues that might lead to apprehension of the gang.

One of the women, it was understood, witnessed the actual abduction.

GIRL SAVES DOG IN SUBWAY

A red rubber apron and a young woman's presence of mind contributed today to save the life of a wandering dog at the entrance to Commonwealth ave. subway.

The dog's rescuer was Mrs. Ruth Robertson of Ivy st., Back Bay, and a red rubber apron she was wearing while receiving a shampoo in a St. Mary st. beauty shop was used as a signal flag to stop an onrushing car and lift the dog from the middle of the track.

Mrs. Robertson saw the dog entering the subway and rushed from the beauty parlor across Commonwealth ave. and down into the subway.

As she reached the dog's side she heard the roar of an approaching car, so she tore off her rubber apron and used it as signal. The motorman brought his car to a stop and Mrs. Robertson then lifted the dog from the track and carried it back to the beauty shop.

The dog, a Pekingese, has but one eye, and police are of opinion the vicinity of the subway entrance.

North Shore Cities Fight Fare Rise by 'L' Merger

Organized protest against the proposed merger of the Boston Elevated and Narrow Gauge with consequent fare increase was getting under way in Revere, Winthrop and Lynn today.

Meetings of civic associations were being called for the purpose of appointing committees to work against the project.

City and town officials, together with City Councillors and members of the General Court were being urged to head the objectors.

Mayor J. Fred Manning of Lynn emphatically declared his opposition to any fare increase, although favoring the idea of the merger.

"I want to go on record as unalterably opposed to a fare increase," Mayor Manning said. "The people of Lynn who go to Boston to work and for other purposes cannot afford to pay any more carfares.

"When the time comes I will appear before the Department of Public Utilities to fight against any increase. I will also call on the Lynn City Councillors and Lynn representatives to assist me in keeping fares down."

"When they asked for the last raise they said they would build new stations and improve conditions. They haven't done anything except provide cars without heat.

"If they eliminate the ferry boats I see no reason why they cannot operate cheaper and in my opinion they are getting plenty of money now."

Similar disapproval was expressed by Mayor Andrew A. Cassass, of Revere.

"Of course, I am opposed to any

Clip Coupon to Protest Fare Increase

Here's the way residents of Lynn, Revere, Winthrop, Beechmont or other communities served by the Narrow Gauge may register their protest against any increase in fares if the Boston Elevated joins the Narrow Gauge in East Boston.

Just clip the coupon reproduced here in the Boston Evening American, sign your own name, have members of your family or friends sign, and forward the coupon to the Public Ulilities Department at Room 167, State House, Boston.

Even if you don't live in the sections served by the Narrow Gauge, but use it for commuting or visiting, your protest is valid.

Mail your protest coupon to the Utilities Department. Do not send it to the Boston American. Send it directly to the officials who must pass on any fare increase proposed. They are at the State House.

Fill in and mail if you wish to voice your protest against fare increase—

DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC UTILITIES, ROOM 167, STATE HOUSE, BOSTON

The undersigned oppose any increase in fares or imposition of other extra charges resulting from the proposed junction of the Boston Elevated Railway and the Boston Revere Beach & Lynn Railroad Co.

UNITED STATES OFFICIALS SEE RUSSO-JAP WAR AS INEVITABLE

LEADERS VISION U. S. AS NEXT FOE IF JAPAN IS VICTOR

Experts Watching Moves in Tokio to Determine Course of U. S.; Navy Program Feared in Orient

By KENNETH CLARK

(Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service, Inc.)

Washington, Jan. 25—Strong belief exists today in high American quarters that war between Soviet Russia and Japan may be a matter of only a few months.

Officials feel the present tension between the two countries is so dangerous a slight provocative incident may touch off hostilities.

WAR HOLE WATCHED

While hoping for peace, American foreign affairs experts, it was learned, are already giving study to America's role should war break in Asia.

One of the first steps, a high official disclosed, probably would be an immediate conference between the United States and other world powers to decide on a course of action.

Under the Kellogg anti-war pact and the Stimson-Hoover doctrine the question of determining the aggressor would come to the fore. On this point, however, the United States has complete freedom of action.

IDOL OF YOUNG JAPS

In well informed circles, the substitution of Gen Sonjuro Hayashi for Gen. Sadao Araki as Japanese minister of war, was viewed will especial importance. Araki dominated the military and naval cliques that dictated policy during the Manchurian invasion.

Although described as more conservative, Gen. Hayashi is said to be the idol of the younger Japanese militare officers, among whom a war spirit is prevalent. One high American expert thus summed up the change:

"I would prefer an older man in command of the military in time of peace, but a younger man, with the confidence of youngsters, in time of war."

Unless and until the Russo-Japanese situation reaches a more acute stage, the United States officially will steadfastly pursue its hands off policy. No direct pressure will be brought on either side.

American officials believe, however, the present United States naval building program, plus the Vinson bill to bring up the navy to treaty strength, is having an effect in offsetting anti-American outbursts in Japan. It is regarded as a potent force for peace.

AMERICA SECOND IN LINE

It was considered as notably significant that Japanese Foreign Minister Hirota, in his address to the Diet in Tokio yesterday, extended a gesture of friendship toward the United States while using aggressive language toward Russia.

Officials here interpret the speech as the beginning of a definite Japanese policy to keep on good terms with the United States, at least until after the Russian situation has been disposed of.

If Japan should be victorious over Russia, America's turn would come next.

JAPS PROTEST IL DUCE WORDS

Rome, Jan. 25 (AP)—Diplomatic circles said today a Japanese protest against a recent article written by Premier Mussolini and a speech by Marquis Giacomo Medici Del Vascello in the Chamber of Deputies was expected to be presented at the foreign office within a few days.

In their statements, Mussolini and the marquis mentioned the "yellow peril." The marquis said:

"Japan, inspired by race hatred, will turn tomorrow on the white man."

Arrive on Wings of Eagle

MISS FRANCES ROBINSON
Included in the group with Gen. Johnson from Washington was his secretary, Miss Frances M. Robinson, who is regarded by the NRA chief as one of his most able aids.

GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON
So speedy was the plane which bore Gen. Johnson and his party, including Assistant Secretary of Labor McGrady from Washington, that he arrived an hour before his appointed time. Consequently, the Boston committee was not there to greet him. He took a taxicab to a hotel where the welcoming delegation met him.

Capt. McKenna of Ancients Dead

Capt. William N. McKenna, one of the oldest members of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Co. of Massachusetts, died at his home, 21 West Cedar st., Boston, today, after a long illness. He was 74 years old.

Funeral services will be held from his residence, followed by a solemn high mass of requiem in St. Joseph's Church, Chambers st., West End, at 10 a. m. Saturday. Interment will be at Holyhood Cemetery, Brookline.

Capt. McKenna, a trustee of the permanent fund of the order, commanded the Ancients in 1923 and 1924.

THOMAS W. BALL ARTIST, DEAD

Old Lyme, Conn., Jan. 25 (AP)—Thomas Watson Ball, 70, noted artist and mural decorator, died at his home here today after a stroke of apoplexy. He had been in ill health a year.

Born and educated in New York and for a time a broker there, his interest in art led him to join J. and H. Lamb, church decorators.

He became associate art editor for Harper Brothers, and widely known as a landscape and marine painter.

He painted the murals for St. Thomas' Church in New York and for Trinity Chapel, Buffalo, and was a member of all the important art clubs in New York City.

While in the seventh regiment of New York, he helped organize the first ambulance corps and received the first Red Cross badge in New York state.

His widow, formerly Alice Lynde Raymond of Norwich, Conn., and a son, Thomas Raymond Ball, an architect survive.

GEN. JOHNSON LANDS HERE

So fast did Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, NRA administrator, fly to Boston today from Washington that he arrived at Boston airport a full hour ahead of schedule and an official committee failed to meet him there.

Gen. Johnson, scheduled to speak tonight in Worcester at the annual banquet of the Worcester Chamber of Commerce, left by plane at 10:10 a. m. and arrived at the airport at 12:30 noon. He was not expected before 1:30 p. m.

The National Recovery Administrator head took it all in his stride, however, when none of the delegation appeared, and smilingly called a cab for a downtown hotel, from whence he left, some time later, for Worcester with the delegation from the Chamber of Commerce.

Accompanying Gen. Johnson on his flight from Washington in the army plane were his secretary, Miss Frances M. Robinson, and Asst. Secretary of Labor Edward F. McGrady.

Chairman George F. Booth and Frank H. Willard of the Worcester Chamber of Commerce committee on reception headed the delegation to greet Gen. Johnson.

Gov. Ely, Gov. Green of Rhode Island and Gov. Brann of Maine will be met in Worcester by Aldus C. Higgins, Chandler Bullock and Ralph Earle of the reception committee.

At the banquet tonight, Howard W. Cowee, retiring president of the chamber, will be the first speaker and will be followed by his successor, William J. Jamieson, who will present John H. Fahey, chairman of the Home Owners' Loan Corp.

Contract Awarded

Washington, Jan. 25—The War Department awarded of a contract to Mondelci and Benvenuti, New London, Conn., for construction of one four-family officers' apartment house at Fort H. G. Wright, New York, for $43,000.

BAILIE QUITS TOMORROW

Washington, Jan. 25 (AP)—Earle Bailie, who has been serving as special fiscal assistant to Secretary Morgenthau, will leave the Treasury tomorrow.

Morgenthau told newsmen that the planned Bailie was returning to private life after the first financing operation in the Treasury's $10,000,000,000 borrowing program.

"Mr. Bailie has been very helpful," Morgenthau said.

Bailie will return to J. & W. Seligman and Company, New York bankers.

50 PERILED IN PORTLAND FIRE

Portland, Me., Jan. 25—Trapped in their apartments by flames that roared through the corridors of the Stanley apartments at 5 Smith st., 50 men, women and children narrowly escaped death, a man was badly hurt when he jumped from a second-story window and a woman escaped with slight bruises when she leaped from the third floor and landed on an auto in the street shortly after midnight today.

The fire, which broke out in a store on the first floor of the building, was discovered by Patrolman Harry Lessard. By the time an alarm was sounded, the building was a roaring furnace.

VINSON BILL UP TOMORROW

Washington, Jan. 25 (INS)—Approving the Vinson bill to build the navy to full treaty strength, the House rules committee today gave the measure preferred status on the House calendar.

Chairman Vinson (D.), Georgia, of the House naval affairs committee expects to call the bill up for passage in the House tomorrow.

The Vinson bill, which authorizes the appropriation of funds for the laying down of 102 ships over a period of five years, would complete a $700,000,000 building program launched when President Roosevelt allotted public works funds to the navy.

The ships to be laid down include an aircraft carrier and destroyers and submarines. Total cost is estimated at $475,000,000 at NRA prices.

The bill would authorize the President to replace obsolete ships and to keep the navy at full treaty strength.

Admiral William H. Standley, chief of naval operations, told the naval affairs committee that the budget bureau has approved a new naval aircraft program which would add 660 planes to the navy.

In effect, the first five-year aviation program of the navy, which provided for 1000 planes, would be expanded and a new five-year program would bring the aviation strength to 1660 planes.

Farley Whets His Axe for Lawyer Committeemen

By PAUL WEIR

Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.

Washington, Jan. 25 (AP)—Postmaster-General Farley, now quietly engaged at the President's order in reorganizing the Democratic national committee, today had before him a committee list showing about a score of members who hold either appointive or elective office or have been practicing law here.

Quietly the Democratic chairman has been placing a figurative pencil mark down the list, either approving or disapproving all memberships.

Eight vacancies now exist on the committee, some through resignation. Other resignations are expected.

HERE'S THE LIST

CONNECTICUT—Mrs. Fannie Dixon Welch, appointed collector of customs at Bridgeport, Jan. 6.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA: John F Costello, Washington lawyer.

KANSAS: Dudley Doolittle, general agent of the farm loan board at Wichita and who maintained a law office in Washington.

MICHIGAN: Horatio J. Abbott, appointed internal revenue collector for Michigan, January 4.

MINNESOTA—Joseph Weif, appointed collector of internal revenue for Minnesota, Jan. 4; Mrs. Agnes M. Hodge, appointed collector of customs at Minneapolis, Jan. 4.

MISSOURI—W. T. Kemper, temporarily with the Reconstruction Finance Corp.

MRS. ROSS NAMED

NEBRASKA—Arthur F. Mullen has practiced law here.

NORTH DAKOTA: Hector H. Perry, appointed collector of internal revenue for North Dakota, June 16, 1933.

OHIO: William A. Julian, appointed treasurer of the United States May 12, 1933.

PUERTO RICO: Menjamin J. Horton, appointed attorney-general for Puerto Rico, Jan. 8, 1934.

SOUTH DAKOTA: W. W. Howes, appointed second assistant postmaster-general and later first assistant.

TEXAS—Jed C. Adams, appointed member of the Board of Tax Appeals May 2, 1933.

UTAH—Norman W. Ewing practicing law here.

WYOMING—Nellie Taylor Ross, committee vice chairman and member from Wyoming, appointed director of the mint, April 26, 1933.

36 MILLION RISE IN U. S. INCOME TAXES URGED

Committee Votes Big Levy on Earnings of Over $7000

Washington, Jan. 25 (INS)—The House ways and means committee today voted an increase of $36,000,000 in income taxes—increasing the levy on all taxable income over $7000 a year—as a part of its proposed sweeping revision of tax laws.

In approving a new schedule of income tax rates, the committee rejected recommendations of Secretary of the Treasury Mongenthau, with one exception. A slight concession was made on earned incomes.

A proposal of Rep. Bacharach (R.) of New Jersey to restore the credit for earned income to benefit salaried classes was adopted after being modified.

Under this proposal a 10 per cent deduction from net income would be allowed on earned income up to $8000 a year, with the first $3000 being considered earned. The amendment restores only a part of the benefit taken from salaries classes in the 1932 law. It is estimated to cost the Treasury less than $10,000,000.

JUMP SURTAX RATE

The committee's proposal provides for one normal income tax rate, with surtaxes beginning on net income over $6000. The bill carries the surtax rate to 59 per cent on income of $1,000,000 or over, to which is added the 4 per cent normal tax.

The new plan will boost the income tax on incomes ranging from $7000 to $100,000 a year from 10 to 23 per cent, while the increase on incomes above $100,000 is less than 10 per cent.

BURDEN GROWS HEAVIER

The heaviest burden will fall upon persons having net income of $10,000 to $20,000 a year, the increase here ranging from 15 to 23 per cent.

The committee yielded to the treasury by dropping the proposal of its investigating sub-committee for an arbitrary cut of 25 per cent in depreciation allowances and abolition of consolidated tax returns.

Instead, the treasury promised to tighten up on depreciation and depletion allowances to save $85,000,000 a year. The committee plan would increase the penalty for making consolidated returns from one to two per cent.

Hint of Spring Only a Gesture

Today's hint at spring was only a gesture because it will turn considerably colder late tonight, the weather man warned.

Before the temperature begins to drop, however, Greater Boston is expected to have some rain in the early part of the night.

Tomorrow it will be fair again but with the mercury reading somewhat below freezing.

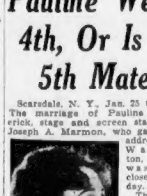
Scarsdale, N. Y., Jan. 25 (AP)—The marriage of Pauline Frederick, stage and screen star, and Joseph A. Marmon, who gave his address as Washington, D. C., was disclosed today.



Pauline Frederick

The couple drove here Sunday, arriving at noon, and the license was issued by Town Clerk Edward Jackson. The record shows the actress gave her age as 50 and her residence as El Camino dr., Beverly Hill, Cal. She said she had been married three times, and that these marriages had ended in divorce.

Marmon said he was 58, that this was his first marriage and that his address was Army and Navy Club, Washington, D. C.

After obtaining the license the couple went to the residence of the Rev. Edward C. Boynton, Scarsdale, where they were married.

Miss Frederick, a native of Boston, and a daughter of Richard O. and Loretta E. Libbey, two years ago celebrated her thirtieth year on the stage by giving Broadway a new kind of "boss" in directing plays. Her system was the use of flattery, instead of barking commands.

Marmon is a colonel of infantry in the U. S. Army, commanding the 16th Infantry and the post of Fort Jay, Governor's Island.

Although Miss Frederick said she had been married three times, her biographical sketch in "Who's Who In the Theater" lists four previous marriages and gives her previous husbands as Frank M. Andrews, Willard Mack, Dr. Charles Rutherford and Hugh Chisholm Leighton.

INDICTMENT OF BROWN SOUGHT

Washington, Jan. 25 (INS)—The administration prepared today to seek early indictment of former Postmaster-General W. F. Brown and several others on charges growing out of the ocean and airmail investigation by the Black Senate committee.

The basis also was laid for early action to abrogate some of the ocean and airmail contracts on the ground that they were awarded illegally.

Coincident with these developments, the Senate approved a resolution broadening the committee's power by including holding companies and aircraft equipment concerns in the scope of the investigation.

Senator Black (D.), of Alabama, postponed further hearings in the air mail scandals until next week. He conferred with Attorney General Cummings and later with Carl L. Ristine, special assistant to Cummings, who was assigned to handle the Government's cases.

SENATE BATTLE ON GOLD BILL NEAR FINISH

Passage by Tomorrow Night Predicted by Administration

Washington, Jan. 25 (INS)—A dispute over control of the $2,000,000,000 economic fund, asked by President Roosevelt for stabilization of international exchange favorable to American interests, today enlivened Senate debate over the administration's new monetary gold program.

Administration leaders predicted enactment of the bill by tomorrow night. They declared control of the fund would be left solely to the secretary of the treasury, as requested by the President. They predicted elimination of the plan, adopted by the Senate Banking and Currency committee, creating a board to administer the huge fund.

Remonetization of silver and expansion of the currency will furnish two additional contests. The silver row will center on an amendment, to be proposed by Senator Wheeler (D) of Montana, directing the government to purchase 1,000,000,000 ounces of silver and use it as the basis for issuing silver certificates. The purchasing would be suspended whenever the price of silver reaches a ratio of 16 to 1 against gold.

Senator Borah (R) of Idaho, meanwhile proposed that all profits from the devaluation of the gold dollar—in excess of the $2,000,000,000 to be set aside for the stabilization fund—should be used as the basis for issuing currency. His proposal would be mandatory on the government, thus insuring an expansion of the currency by anywhere from $1,000,000,000 to $2,000,000,000.

Administration leaders opposed both plans. They insisted both would be rejected. Neither Wheeler nor Borah anticipated victory but they were ready to force a vote for the record.

216 PERISH IN SHIP BLAST

Shanghai, Jan. 25 (AP)—Two hundred and sixteen men, women and children were burned to death or drowned the night of Jan. 21 when the Chinese steamer Weitung caught fire and exploded in the Yangtse river.

An account of the disaster, one of the worst in Chinese annals, was brought today by the Chinese steamer Kiangan which arrived from Hankow.

The Weitung was headed up river when she grounded 60 miles below Hankow. She carried 200 passengers, a crew of 50 and a cargo of tallow and cotton.

At midnight the ship lurched and the tallow caught fire, turning the vessel into a blazing inferno. Boiler explosions followed instantly.

LYTHGOE COMA TAUNTS TOMB DOUBTERS

Egyptologist Sinking as Physicians Battle Mystery Stroke

Despite the scoffing of testy scientists, belief that the age-old curse of the Pharaohs had fastened on Albert M. Lythgoe, noted Egyptologist, grew today as his life ebbed in Massachusetts General Hospital.

Although physicians declare the "curse" allegedly imposed on rifflers of the tomb of King Tutankhamen is superstition, the long death list of members of the Lord Carnarvon expedition was pointed to in refutation.

PHYSICIANS SILENT

While hospital officials still maintained secrecy regarding the illness of the former curator of the Museum of Fine Arts, it was learned that he was near death.

Mrs. Lythgoe, at their home at 91 Bay State rd., also refused to discuss her husband's mysterious malady.

Whatever may be the nature of his afflictions, it was the fact that former Curator Lythgoe, who more recently was with the Metropolitan Museum in New York, is the 21st member of Lord Carnarvon's expedition to be stricken.

STRICKEN AT CHRISTMAS

Famed for his connection with the opening of the inner tomb of King Tut, Curator Lythgoe became ill shortly after his arrival here at Christmas time.

More than a week ago his condition became so serious he was taken to the Phillips House. Since then he has been in a coma and steadily sinking.

According to Dows Dunham, present curator of the Egyptian department of the Museum of Fine Arts, King Tut's tomb was originally opened nearly 3000 years before Lord Carnarvon began his expedition.

Come Home! and Amelia Did

Amelia Earhart found out how solicitous is her husband, George Palmer Putnam, the publisher, of her health after she was stricken with laryngitis at a Boston Rotary Club lecture yesterday. She is telephoning him from her Boston hotel and he is telling her to cancel all engagements and come home. Today she is in New York under a doctor's care.

TAX CHIEF ASKS 2 P. C. RETAIL SALES LEVY

Alternative Is Burden of 16 Millions on Realty, He Says

As the best way out of the financial dilemma which the state faces this year owing to the decrease in revenue and additional costs of government, Tax Commissioner Henry F. Long today urged establishment of a 2 per cent retail sales tax.

Speaking before the legislative committee on taxation in the Gardner auditorium, State House, Commissioner Long warned that it is either the sales tax or an additional burden on real estate of $16,000,000.

Mayor Mansfield was recorded by Leadore Fox, the city's legislative counsel, as favoring the tax with exemptions for necessaries of life, as distinctive from a general retail sales tax.

With real estate showing a drop of millions and with no means of relieving it as was done in 1933, Commissioner Long stated, the state finds itself short to the extent of $16,000,000.

He said this sum cannot be made up by the abandonment of government activities in cities and towns, such as schools, fire and police and hospitals.

Every move of the state to abolish state activities, he pointed out, has been fought.

"The situation is serious," he stated. "Real estate cannot stand the strain. It should be relieved. Increase of the income tax would only partially meet the situation and the 6 per cent tax on interest and dividends is all that can be imposed because of conditions.

"With but 18 per cent of the people paying real estate taxes and 5½ per cent paying income taxes, it seems but fair that the large percentage, paying no taxes at all, be brought into the taxable field."

Manufacturers and wholesalers, he stressed, would be exempted from the sales tax, leaving them in a position to meet competition from other states.

He held that it would be a much saner course to ask a group which pays no taxes to give 2 per cent on their purchases of intangibles.

HULTMAN ASKS 2 STATE LAWS TO CUT CRIME

Aims at Auto Stealing Loophole and "Suspicious Persons"

"Make things easier for the police, and harder for the criminal."

That was the request today of Police Comm. Eugene Hultman as he appeared before the Legislature's judiciary committee on Beacon Hill.

To carry out the program, he requested passage of two laws, one making unauthorized operation of an automobile a felony, and another establishing the crime of being a suspicious person.

After telling the legislators that injuries and property damage caused by stolen autos costs Boston $500,000 a year, not to mention $200,000 in salaries to policemen engaged in these cases, Hultman complained that while stealing a car is a felony under the present statute, judges are inclined to fall back on a provision that makes unauthorized use of a car a mere misdemeanor. He asked that an amendment be passed, striking that provision from the law.

Just what he expects a judge to do in a minor case of non-malicious, non-criminal unauthorized use of an automobile, Hultman did not say.

Even more sensational was his demand police be given the right to arrest a person on suspicion, without being forced to implicate him in a definite felony.

As the laws now stand, the police head complained, an officer must have reasonable knowledge of a person's connection with a crime before he can arrest him. And after arrest the person must be charged with a part in the crime.

Hultman seeks a law that would make mere suspicion a sufficient warrant for arrest and detention while police made further investigations to determine the guilt or innocence of the suspect. He designated this suspicion specifically as a crime.

The commissioner said the police now have considerable power in the apprehension and questioning of suspicious persons at night time, but said it was impossible in many cases to arrest known criminals during the day unless it was possible to link them directly and immediately to a given offense.

50 MORE FACE LOSS OF JOBS ON PROJECTS

Fired Workers Plan a Big Meeting to Protest Action

"Forged" work slips caused the discharge of 150 CWA workers and jobs of 50 more are in jeopardy, CWA officials declared today.

The 150 discharged were the men who marched on City Hall yesterday afternoon, protesting to Mayor Mansfield that "discrimination" led them and their positions on a Highland st., Roxbury, paving department project.

The work slips of the 50 men in question today are said to be "spurious," and may cause their discharge.

Federal Re-Employment Administrator Everett L. Hanna said the first 150 men were never properly hired, that the situation may be the same with regard to the second group.

Other officials hinted that the slips originated in the city public works department or in some other city department.

PLAN PROTEST MEETING

It is understood that these 150 men were discharged by city CWA officials, and not the federal board, because the city projects have been overloaded. Word came from Washington today that no municipality that has exceeded its quota of workers can expect further CWA payments.

These workers and others in Roxbury and West Roxbury districts were invited to attend a protest mass meeting in Orisfield Hall, Orisfield st. and Blue Hill ave., Roxbury, tonight.

Hundreds of mimeographed "fliers," signed by the "Roxbury Unemployment Committee," urged CWA workers, those registered for jobs, their friends and neighbors to attend this meeting at 8 p. m.

The "fliers" were headed in large capital letters: "Protest Against CWA Cuts! Stop Layoffs of CWA Workers. Demand Jobs for Registered Voters."

MANY FIRMS SEEK PAY

The handbills declared many had received CWA jobs through "political pull." They also argued that organization was the only weapon to use against lay-offs and declared:

"Mayor Are afraid of organized workers and give in to their demands."

"Let's Organize Now!"

More trouble was in sight at CWA headquarters today when complaints began to come in from firms that supplied materials to CWA projects as far back as Dec. 10 and had not been paid.

Col. H. L. Morse, head of the State purchasing office, said much of the delay was due to buying in many communities. Verbal agreements took the place of written contracts, it was pointed out, and there were no records for disbursement officials.

Ford to Honor McGuffey

Washington, Pa., Jan. 25 (INS)—Henry Ford plans to erect a monument in memory of Dr. William Holmes McGuffey, author of the famous McGuffey readers, on the site of the log cabin in which McGuffey was born, Sept. 23, 1800, near here.

Neaves Hits State's Laws as Bar to Home Loans

President Walter H. Neaves of the Federal Home Loan Bank of Boston told the legislative committee on banks today that Massachusetts banking restrictions prevent the federal government from making millions of dollars available for loans here.

Opposition to legislation asked by Neaves to permit savings banks to borrow from the Federal Home Loan Bank for the purpose of making loans on real estate was voiced by Rutherford E. Smith, representing the Savings Bank Association.

"It is unsound in principle and dangerous to allow a bank to borrow for the purpose of relending," said Smith. "At present savings banks have the right to borrow only to pay depositors."

Four other bills filed by Neaves met no opposition. Three would authorize savings banks to invest in bonds of federal home loan banks, allow co-operative banks to become members of the Federal Home Loan Bank of Boston, allow the co-operatives to include stocks of or deposits in the Home Loan Bank in their assets, and increase the present limit for subscription of savings banks in the Federal Home Loan Bank of Boston.

MRS. CARROLL MAY JOIN FILMS

Laconia, N. H., Jan. 25 (AP)—Mrs. Lillian B. Carroll, engaged in divorce proceedings with her husband, Mayor Charles E. Carroll, announced today that she may shortly enter the field of motion picture production in Hollywood.

Her formal statement said:

"Mrs. Lilla Guyon, noted aviatrix of New York and Florida, is the guest of Mrs. Lillian B. Carroll at her home on the Weirs blvd. Mrs. Carroll, Mrs. Guyon and Miss Josephine Swain are leaving shortly for Hollywood, Calif., where they may become interested in producing pictures. They expect to make a tour around the world for material for something new in pictures."

KIDNAP SCARE IN HIGH SCHOOL

Officials at Somerville high school, the parents of a 17-year-old girl sophomore and Somerville police were thrown into a flurry of excitement today when two mysterious telephone calls were received at the school in an attempt to have the girl released from classes.

The first call, in a feminine voice, informed the master's office that the mother of the sophomore was seriously ill and that the girl was wanted at home immediately.

Officials of the school were attempting to check with the girl's home when a second call, in apparently the same voice, was received.

This time the caller wanted to know the reason for the girl's delay in arriving home and said that the need of her presence was urgent.

Finally the girl's father was reached and when he investigated at home he learned that his wife was not ill and knew nothing about the calls.

The girl herself was questioned at the school and claimed ignorance of the caller's identity.

It was through a telephone call to her school, made admittedly by Kenneth Buck, her kidnaper, that 10-year-old Peggy McMath of Harwichport, was lured from her schoolroom, Somerville police recalled today as they attempted to trace the two calls.

MISS EARHART LOSES VOICE

New York, Jan. 25 (AP)—Amelia Earhart is under a physician's care with an acute case of laryngitis, her husband, George Palmer Putnam, the publisher, said today.

Miss Earhart cancelled a speaking engagement she had today at Phillips Exeter Academy, Exeter, N. H., and came to New York from Boston early this morning by train.

Despite her throat ailment, she addressed an audience of 1000 yesterday in Boston on "Aviation in New England." But her voice failed after the lecture.

She has postponed her scheduled visit to Atlanta, where she was to speak Sunday, for a week. She has about six more speaking engagements, Mrs. Putman said, and had hoped to devote next month to flying.

12 Women Mine Pickets Seized

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Jan. 25 (AP)—A dozen women were arrested by city police today on picket lines near the South Wilkesbarre colliery of the Glen Alden Coal Co. Police say the women joined anthracite strikers in endeavoring to prevent miners from entering the colliery.

Round 2 in Hubby-Ex-Wife Fight Is Draw in Court

Lauren McWhirter and his "annulled" wife," Gertrude McDonald, who engaged in spirited fisticuffs in Newton court house yesterday, appeared before Judge Bacon for another round today, each seeking an assault and battery warrant for the other.

After hearing several witnesses and the principals, court took the matter under advisement, remarking:

THREE WITNESSES FOR HIM

The fight followed a hearing at which Miss McDonald, 23, and attractive, accused McWhirter of failing to support her and their child and at which she learned for the first time he had had their marriage annulled.

Miss McDonald said that after the case was over McWhirter called her a name, she went back to get another complaint against him and he hit her, pushed her against a wall and threw her down.

Judge Bacon called for witnesses and Joseph Connolly, Michael Norton and Frank Geraldi all testified McWhirter merely tried to defend himself.

HOW IT STARTED

McWhirter revealed the name that strated the trouble. "I said —— 'couldn't you think of anything else to do to me'?"

Her mother, he said, "started running in circles." His "annulled wife" began throwing punches, he testified, and to protect himself he grabbed her arm and she pushed him against a wall. She bent her head and charged.

"I stepped aside and she hit the wall," he said.

Los Angeles, Jan. 24 (US)—Here to convalesce after an attack of pneumonia at Kingston, Jamaica, Rosamond Pinchot, daughter of Amos Pinchot and niece of Gov. Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania, arrived at Los Angeles harbor today.

She will pass the winter months with Zoe Akin, playwright, at Pasadena.

MODERN 'CARRIE' WRECKS GAMING DEN

Carterville, Ill., Jan. 25 (AP)—This county, once heralded as "Bloody Williamson" because of its mine, Ku Klux Klan, gang and political wars, but peaceful of late, was agog today over a modern Carrie Nation.

A quiet church worker, Mrs. Charles Gower, told how she raided single-handed an alleged gambling place across the street from the postoffice here and, after demolishing almost everything in sight, took her married son home with her.

"The officers wouldn't raid that place," she said, "so I did it. And they can expect me back if I ever find my son there again."

"I'm still trying to find out something about it," Norman Walker, night chief of police, said today. "I've been on the job for 18 years and never heard of open gambling here."

"Why," asserted Mrs. Gower, "those fellows running that place were so bold that they visited CWA projects, told the workers where they were running a game and invited them to come in."

Mrs. Gower said she pretended she had a pistol, lined 16 men against the wall, tore up all the cards, wrecked alleged gambling equipment, gathered up the money her son had lost and departed.

FOOD RUSHED TO 3000 MAROONED

North Sydney, N. S., Jan. 25 (AP)—Black smoke drifted lazily from the funnel of the sturdy icebreaker Montcalm at dawn today, as workers scurried about, loading the last of supplies for isolated communities along the northeast coast of Cape Breton island.

Hemmed in by impassable roads and frozen harbors some 3000 residents are said to be in dire need of food and other supplies. Cattle lack fodder and, according to Dr. C. L. McMillan, who flew into the distressed area, there is no kerosene for lighting purposes. Flour supplies, he said, probably would last until the end of the week.

The Montcalm, heavily laden with supplies and provisions awaiting shipment many weeks, will steam out of the harbor for Ingonish, where she will endeavor to buck her way through solid ice to land.

From there she is expected to call at neighboring ports en route to distant St. Paul's Island, off the northeast tip of the island, where a lighthouse keeper, his family and a half dozen workmen are reported living on reduced food rations.

All ports in North Victoria County have been frozen over for a month and travel by road, difficult for many weeks, was closed for 95 miles a few days ago.

3 CITIES FIGHT FARE BOOST

fare increase on the Narrow Gauge," he declared. "At the present time, particularly, the residents of Revere cannot meet any further taxes on their pocketbooks. Furthermore, an increase would have a bad effect on the summer business at the beach. I am confident. With business the way it is, this is no time to increase fares. I will certainly work against it."

MERGER DESIRABLE

It was pointed out that the merger in itself, giving direct access to downtown Boston by way of the East Boston tunnel was desirable, but the fare increase was objectionable.

Under a proposed schedule of fares submitted to the Boston Transit Commission, Narrow Gauge riders would have to pay five cents more to get to Boston.

At the present time the fare from Lynn is 15 cents, and that from Revere and Winthrop 10 cents, which entitles patrons to free transportation across the harbor in ferries.

Under the proposed schedule Revere and Winthrop passengers would pay a nickel and Lynn passengers 10 cents on the Narrow Gauge, and an additional dime would be paid by all on the Elevated.

In other words the Elevated would insist on collecting 10 cents to transport all passengers from the proposed Day st., East Boston, junction with the Narrow Gauge, in town.

According to Atty. Samuel Hoar, representing the Narrow Gauge, the merger would give the Elevated from 9,000,000 to 10,000,000 new fares annually. This he said would supply sufficient revenue to support an extension of the tunnel to Day sq., less than a mile, and net a substantial yearly profit.

HOLDUP VICTIM IN COMA 36 HRS.

Haverhill, Jan. 25—Lying helpless on a couch in his home for nearly 36 hours after being beaten and robbed, Harry Hardy, 73, was found today in the house at 316 Groveland st. by a neighbor who became curious as to his whereabouts.

The elderly man told police that at about 10:30 Tuesday night, he was attacked by three men in the rear of his home and beaten unconscious, and that when he regained his senses he discovered he had been robbed of $15.

He said he managed to crawl into the house and reach a couch, where he had lain until today when the neighbor called and found him.

Police called a doctor who said the elderly victim of the three footpads was suffering from shock as well as a head injury.

Woman's Fists Rout 20 Fish Strikers

While more than 100 men watched two fishermen battle a mob of 20 striking fishing hands, a lone woman came to the aid of the pair and cattered their assailants with her fists, police reported today.

The two victims of the mob were Max Cutschler and Otto Hameron both of 52 Waltham st., South End. They had left the Bay State Fish Co. and were on their way home when surrounded and attacked.

Suddenly the fight took on a new turn when Mrs. Helen Flynn, 29, of 10 Border st., East Boston, sailed into the attackers and fists flying, had them on the run by the time police riot squad appeared. Although the mob immediately dispersed, policemen arrested Thomas Durkin, 32, of 37 Gov. Winthrop rd., Somerville; Daniel J. Saunders, 33, 621 H st., South Boston, and Thomas Riley, 36, of 34 Bennington st., East Boston. They were charged with assault and battery.

GERMAN DEBTS PARLEY OPENS

Berlin, Jan. 25 (AP)—One of the most important financial conferences since the war opened today between representatives of foreign creditors of Germany, the Reichsbank and government officials to discuss a moratorium on part of the foreign debt payments.

In the absence of Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, president of the Reichsbank, who left Berlin unexpectedly last night, the meeting was presided over by Vice-President Dreyse.

Dr. Schacht's sudden departure on the eve of a meeting called at his invitation was pointed to in banking circles as substantiating reports of friction between cabinet members and German central bank officials, who recently announced a cut of from 50 to 30 per cent in foreign interest and amortization payments.

GROUP IN HOUSE SEEK OUSTER OF HOPKINS

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Washington, Jan. 25 (INS)—Aroused by widespread charges of graft and favoritism in the Civil Works Administration, a group of House Democrats today were considering a drive to oust Harry L. Hopkins, federal relief administrator.

The campaign calls for amendments to the $350,000,000 appropriation which President Roosevelt will ask to continue CWA jobs for 4,000,000 men through the winter.

FEAR PRESIDENT

The chief deterrent to an active fight, the leaders frankly admit, is that the White House is standing loyally behind Hopkins.

Fearful of bringing down upon them the wrath of the administration with the election coming on, the ringleaders conceded the extent of their open fight depends upon the number of Democrats joining the movement.

Proposed amendments to the forthcoming bill include:

Creation of a bi-partisan board to direct the CWA, limitation on the types of projects to be undertaken, to avoid charges of wasteful work and prescribing rates of pay to end quarrels between branches of the relief and PWA.

HOPKINS DEFENDS WORKERS

Meanwhile, Administrator Hopkins declared that graft, greed and corruption is not so rampant or widespread within the civil works administration, as recent developments would indicate. But his own department and Department of Justice continued investigations of charges.

While Hopkins was issuing his statement, Washington police announced the second arrest of a CWA worker accused of having forced survey workers to pay for high efficiency ratings.

U. S. HOLDS PURSE STRINGS

With more than $3,000,000,000 in federal funds about to be put through the contract and building stage of spending, Public Works Administrator Ickes announced that the federal authorities would hold the purse strings.

"Millions of dollars will not be advanced to officials of states and municipalities to do with as they please," Ickes declared. "Funds will be advanced in installments. Local officials must show what the money has been spent for, avoiding any rake-offs on materials or exorbitant charges."

Clubwoman, Hurt in Crash, Is Dead

Greenwich, Ct., Jan. 25 (INS)—Mrs. Howard Denard, prominent clubwoman and social registerite, died in Greenwich Hospital today of injuries received in an automobile accident Jan. 15 in which Mrs. Chester P. Childs was killed. Both women were riding in an automobile driven by Tax Collector Robert M. Wilcox when it was in collision with a bus operated by John McManus, who is being held by police under $2500 bonds. Wilcox, his wife and another woman passenger escaped serious injury.

Gladys Gottlier Divorced

Los Angeles, Jan. 25 (INS)—Gladys Gottlier, the actress, today had received a divorce decree from Archie Gottlier, song writer, on her charges of cruelty.

Meddling and Muddling U.S. 'Statesmen' Tie America to Europe, While Public Sleeps

Secretary of State Kellogg with the aid of M. Briand got the United States to join the nations of the world in denouncing war as an instrument of policy.

Secretary of State Stimson, in a bold and unchallenged interpretation of the Kellogg Pact, enunciated a doctrine virtually abandoning American neutrality.

Kellogg Pact Dangers

He suggested, during the Chinese-Russian dispute in 1929, that the Kellogg Pact implied that each signatory was confronted with the right and the duty to adopt a definite attitude towards any country involved in an international dispute.

During the course of his meddlesome attitude of the Manchurian question he went even further and declared it was the definite obligation of a signatory of the Kellogg Pact to make known its attitude toward a violator of international agreements and there COULD BE NO NEUTRALITY UNDER THE PACT.

This doctrine has been taken over and elaborated to a stage even more dangerous by spokesmen of the present administration.

Mr. Norman Davis, who once was spokesman for Mr. Stimson, speaking at Geneva in behalf of the United States, accepted the Stimson idea and declared the United States WAS READY in case of a dispute between nations to make known her attitude toward the "aggressor."

Mr. Davis furthermore stated that if the United States concurred in the opinion of the other nations as to the aggressor then the United States was ready TO ABANDON her historic right of neutrality AND HER HISTORIC POLICY OF THE FREEDOM OF THE SEAS in order to give full effect to the steps taken by other nations to punish the aggressor.

Europe Waits on Roosevelt

It was explained that if any American nationals attempted to trade or conduct business with the nation named "AGGRESSOR," even if the United States were in no way involved in the dispute, these American nationals would have to run the risk of attack and confiscation of their property at sea without any hope of assistance from their own government and their own people.

Mr. Davis declared this doctrine would positively be made effective if a disarmament agreement based on the MacDonald plan is reached at Geneva.

But what is more pertinent, the capitals of Europe have been informed that this doctrine can be made effective WITHOUT BEING SUBMITTED TO THE UNITED STATES SENATE, the treaty making power of the country.

This doctrine, Europe has been informed, MAY BE PROMULGATED IN A PRESIDENTIAL UTTERANCE and would be regarded as having the same force as the Monroe Doctrine!

M'CORMICK IS GANNA'S CRITIC

Chicago, Jan. 25 (AP)—Lad by her former husband, Harold F. McCormick, many society leaders turned out last night to see—and also hear—Ganna Walska, the Polish opera singer. It was almost the fifth anniversary of her last appearance here.

There were rows of empty seats in Auditorium Theater and many of the boxes in what was once the famous "Diamond Horseshoe" went unoccupied.

Of Mme. Walska the critics had agreed that her voice had improved, but most of their praises were for the dramatic aspects of her recital in which she appeared in elaborate period costumes.

Encores were frequent and Mr. McCormick, with whom she had luncheon after she arrived in the city the other day, was noted as one of the most enthusiastic applauders.

WORK MORE, EARN MORE, SPEND MORE IN 1934

TRYST KILLER'S FATE TO JURY

New York, Jan. 25 (INS)—The case of Mrs. Millie Prince, who killed Charles J. Wolfert, Astoria jeweler, with a knife, will go to the jury late today. She is being tried for second degree murder.

For hours on the witness stand she defied the prosecutor yesterday with such vehemence that the judge once leaned forward and asked:

"Are you serious, Mrs. Prince?"

But in spite of her gruelling cross-examination she stuck to her story that Wolfert, her former employer, was loathsome to her, and that instead of being jealous of him, she hated him because of his constant attentions to her.

She again told the story of the note Wolfert had written, while they sat in the woods near Long Island Sound, where he was stabbed 19 times. The note gave her permission to kill him.

N. Y. SALES TAX INCOME GROWS

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 25 (AP)—An improvement in business throughout New York state is seen on basis of returns from the one per cent retail sales tax for the third period thus far received, it was said today by Dep. State Tax Comm. John H. Thompson.

"In many instances merchants have reported on a volume of trade double that indicated on the preceding return," he said. "This favorable situation was occasioned in part by the holiday rush, but the general impression prevails that business is better. We expect that receipts for this period will greatly exceed those of both preceding periods."

Plague Menaces India Quake Area

Calcutta, Jan. 25 (AP)—The peril of disease stalked through India today in the wake of the earthquake which killed uncounted thousands 10 days ago.

Authorities said they believed approximately 6000 had been killed outright by the quake itself, although unofficial sources placed the death toll as high as 25,000 and as low as 4000. Disease was especially threatening in the provinces of Bihar and Orissa.

TECH BALLOON FLIES HIGH

Final details of a plan to study weather conditions by sending balloons 12 miles up into the Stratosphere were completed today by the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. The tests will be made in a few weeks at the Lambert field airport in St. Louis, Mo.

According to Prof. Carl G. Rossby, 40 ballons, carrying sensative recording instruments will be sent up. The instruments, weighing only a few ounces each, will record temperature, humidity and atmospheric pressure.

After gaining the desired height the balloons will lautomatically burst and the instruments, encased in specially-prepared bamboo shock-proof cases, will fall to earth. The St. Louis airport was chosen for the experiment in hope that all of the instruments will fall upon land.

Gasoline Pool in Secret Session

Washington, Jan. 25 (AP)—Detailed consideration of the gasoline stabilization pool and marketing practices agreements for the oil industry was begun today at the second session of a conference of signatories of the pacts. The sessions are closed to the public.

The purpose is to determine the methods of application of the agreements and effect they will have individually within the industry.

PEG SULLIVAN FISH STORY

Hollywood, Cal., Jan. 25—Margaret Sullavan, one-time clerk in the Harvard Co-op at Cambridge and now a Hollywood star, returned to the film capital today after an absence of eight days.

But what a return!

Poor Peg, peering through a closed and bruised eye, exhibited a cut beneath her left eye, a badly-puffed cheek and cut chin. Otherwise she was in good shape.

The face injuries, Margaret said, happened when she went trout fishing with a number of friends at a foothill ranch in Arizona. The girl attempted to cast a fly but it lashed back and imbedded itself in her face. And so she came back to Hollywood for medical treatment.

Margaret took time out in telling of the fishing accident to scoff at reports that she and Jed Harris, New York producer, are more than interested in each other.

ROTHERMERE IN FASCISM PLEA

London, Jan. 25 (US)—Fascism is Britain's hope against being pushed into another war, Lord Rothermere, noted London publisher, declared today.

Viscount Rothermere a week ago bluntly endorsed Sir Oswald Mosley's British Fascist organization, and directed the attention of "Young England" toward it.

Writing today in his London Daily Mail under the heading, "The Black Shirts Will Stop War," Lord Rothermere said:

"The positive, practical policy of the Black Shirt movement, with its definite aims and disciplined organization, is Britain's safeguard against being once more muddled into war.

"Heads of governments who have been soldiers are far less likely to start a war than politicians. Moreover, the first aim of the Black Shirt movement is internal reconstruction. When a nation is concentrated on domestic affairs, there is less officious interference in the concerns of other states."

Cary Grant Delays Wedding in London

London, Jan. 25—Cary Grant, Hollywood screen star, and Virginia Cherrill, have indefinitely postponed their wedding, although the bride-to-be applied for a license in Westminster early this month, it has been learned here.

"I have been visiting my father in Bristol," Grant said, "which is the reason for the delay. However, the engagement is still on.

"I am awaiting Paramount's instructions when to return, and it is possible the wedding will not occur in England."

Do you need some ready cash? Surely, most everyone does these days. The dealers listed in the financial columns of the American and Advertiser are ready to loan you money on any sort of collateral, without any delay. All transactions are strictly confidential.

Tips for New Secret Agent

Another of the hundreds of new "Secret Agents"—X-9 to receive membership in the club was Frank Davie, pupil at the Industrial School for Crippled Children. In addition Frank received some real police tips from Officer James Flaherty of Station 16, Back Bay. Clip the coupon from the comic page and get your membership and badge. (Boston American photo.)

LETTERS SWAMP SECRET AGENT

Another day and another deluge of coupons from boys and girls eager to join his club came today to "Secret Agent X-9," but the wily sleuth is taking the storm in stride and is asking for more.

The applications now are well into the thousands and "Secret Agent X-9" is more and more amazed at the response to his offer to boys and girls who want to join his club and wear a shiny replica of his detective's badge.

For boys and girls who failed to get in on the first rush there is still opportunity because "Secret Agent X-9," whose adventures as a keen-eyed and quick-thinking sleuth are being depicted in the newest comic strip in the Boston Evening American, wants you all to get in.

In this issue you boys and girls will find a coupon which, after you have filled it out with your name and address and forwarded it to this office will entitle you to membership in the "Secret Agent X-9 Club."

As soon as you have sent this coupon to "Secret Agent X-9," in care of the Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston, your badge will be sent you.

Every day the adventures of "Secret Agent X-9" will be depicted in this comic strip for you to follow—and if you are a member of his club you will be right in the swim in your neighborhood.

Bogus Bill Pays Delinquent Tax

Constable Peter McGann, of Waltham, who pounces on people who are in arrears in their taxes, wheedled a $5 payment out of a delinquent yesterday and discovered today, somewhat to his chargin, that the money was counterfeit. Nor does he know from whom he got it—so many are delinquent.

Two bogus fives also made their appearance at the Waltham National Bank and to complete the day, it was discovered that a $20 "certified" check, used for buying liquor at a Waltham store, and sent to the bank for clearance, lacked covering funds.

Woman Linked in Plymouth Fire

Plymouth, Jan. 25—A woman firebug was sought today for a series of fires in cottages at White Horse Beach during the past year. The latest blaze was in the summer home of Hortense Mason of Scituate harbor, into which two women were seen to go.

FOUR SEIZED IN LYNCH QUIZ

Hazard, Ky., Jan. 25 (AP)—Four men were arrested today as county officials pressed their investigation of the lynching of Rex Scott, 20-year-old Negro, who was taken from Perry County Jail here by a mob last night and hanged in a graveyard in adjoining Knott County.

Jailer Combs telegraphed the details to Gov. Laffoon at Frankfort. Kentucky law requires that the governor remove any jailer surrendering a prisoner to a mob and grant him a hearing to determine if he shall be reinstated.

Forty masked leaders of a mob of 300 men forced their way into the jail and cornered Deputy Jailer Knuckles. The keys were found on him.

Scott was charged with slugging Alex Johnson, a miner, here Saturday. Johnson died at the hospital here two hours after the Negro was found lynched.

Sheriff McIntosh organized a posse and pursued the mob. The trail led into Knott county. The officers found Scott's body hanging in the Cornett Hill cemetery. Approximately 40 shots had been fired into the body.

Tavern Licenses Fail to Cause Rush

Licenses for taverns, favored at the special election, probably will not be issued before Monday, it was learned today. At the same time members of the License Board said there would be no rush.

OFFICER'S LOVE WORTH $7500

Chicago, Jan. 25—Convicted of alienating the affections of Norman Nottingham, a police officer and patrol wagon driver, Mrs. Myrtle Tanner Blackledge, former Republican collector of internal revenue, today was under orders to pay $7500 damages to the policeman's wife, Susanne Nottingham.

The verdict was returned by a jury, which heard the case minus the testimony of the policeman, who was refused permission to take the witness stand, after the court heard reports that Nottingham had overheard parts of the previous testimony of other witnesses.

The cash award was far lower than the $100,000 asked by Mrs. Nottingham, and was only awarded after the jury of 10 married men and two bachelors deliberated for more than six hours.

The career of Mrs. Blackledge is one in which bad luck has played an important part. Several years ago she lost $50,000 in a crooked faro game. Then her husband and son died, 13 days apart.

300 to Attend Ryan Bachelor Dinner

More than 300 men, most of whom are prominent in political or industrial circles will attend a bachelor dinner tonight at the Hotel Bradford, to Morgan T. Ryan, registrar of motor vehicles. Registrar Ryan is to be married on Feb. 3.

Arrangements for the banquet have been made by Motor Vehicle Inspector Max Jacobs, Paul Cifrino and Rep. Frank McFarland.

TWO HEADLINERS in one Great Company!

ONE leading product makes a company a great success. Two leaders make history!

But ever since it was first organized, the American Oil Company has been doing the unusual.

First came AMOCO-GAS—the original special motor fuel. All the ordinary premium gasolines you read about—or hear about—or have been using—are but imitations of AMOCO-GAS. For AMOCO-GAS made history almost two decades ago! It revolutionized two major industries—gasoline and automotive. It made possible today's high compression motor.

AMOCO-GAS costs less than regular gasoline or ordinary premium gasoline—on a mileage basis alone. Its amazing pick-up—power—riding luxury and driving ease—and other operating economies are yours gratis. They cost you nothing!

But the great American Oil Company's research laboratories didn't stop with AMOCO-GAS.

They next created Orange AMERICAN GAS—made with a pure petroleum base and the best gasoline selling at regular gas price.

It was the first "regular" to be colored—orange—to prevent substitution. Other gasolines are now also colored orange—but matching the color doesn't match the quality of Orange AMERICAN GAS.

Take your choice! For the lowest-cost-per-mile—AMOCO-GAS. For regular priced gasoline at its best—Orange AMERICAN GAS. They're both headliners in one great company—and each the best in its price class.

"Now I see why our car rides so slick!"

"They work just like your own knees!"

"Just wait until we ride—you'll see!"

"There's what gives you your gliding ride!"

Cartoonists picture them. News men write columns about them. Camera men snap them. People ask about them—look at them—talk about them. Everybody from schoolboys to their grandparents flock to see them.

"Watch those wheels take up those bumps!"

KNEE-ACTION WHEELS

talked about everywhere... they "STOLE" the Auto Show

THE Gliding Ride on General Motors Cars, made possible by Knee-Action Wheels, is the motoring achievement of 1934. It ranks with those other General Motors achievements: the Self Starter; Four Wheel Brakes; Ethyl Gasoline; Fisher No Draft Ventilation.

Glance at the diagrams on this page; see the demonstration at the Show. The wheels "step" over ruts and bumps—as a man steps over them by bending his knee—without jar or jounce to the body. Your first ride will be an entirely new experience in a 1934 Chevrolet, Oldsmobile, Pontiac, Buick, La Salle or Cadillac.

Distinctively individual, these 1934 General Motors Cars; yet a consistent beauty relates them all. Beauty which satisfies, not showiness that startles. Beauty that one can live with and grow daily more contented with. Beauty that does not astonish but is genuinely admired. Progress plus beauty—to this double ideal General Motors has dedicated its Silver Anniversary Automobiles.

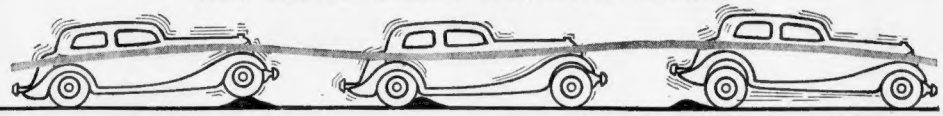
WHY OLD-TYPE CARS BUMP AND BOUNCE

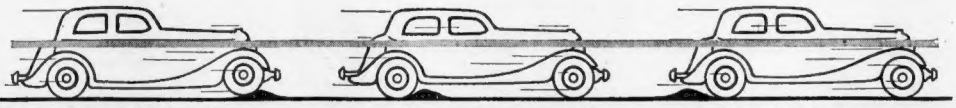


When a bump is encountered, the stiff front springs lift the front of the car higher than the rear, causing the rear springs to compress.

The rear wheels striking the bump cause the rear springs to compress still further.

Upon crossing the bump, the compression of the rear springs releases, causing the car to pitch upward and throw the passengers violently forward.

WHY CARS WITH KNEE-ACTION WHEELS GLIDE



KNEE-ACTION WHEELS, with their soft springs, "step" over a bump without lifting the front end; the car remains practically level.

The car is still practically level when the rear wheels meet the bump, causing less compression of the rear springs.

Pitching is minimized as the rear wheels cross the bump, changing your ride to a glide.

THE PUBLIC GARDEN was the setting for an out-of-door dog show yesterday morning and many dog fanciers stood in the biting wind and slushed through the muddy lanes to see the shivering pups . . . Mrs. Homer Loring in a mink coat brightened with a corsage of sweet peas was being towed along by her four huge Newfoundland dogs, the biggest and best natured beasts we ever encountered . . . one of them, Seafarer, has been many times a champion . . . Miss Katherine Loring in leopard skin coat and green Kelly assisted in showing the mammoth beasts . . .

Attracting the most attention was Mrs. Francis V. Crane of Needham with her two great Pyrenees, Urdos and Belle, tremendous white beasts and very rare in this country . . . they resemble the Newfoundlands except in color . . . Mrs. Crane wore a snappy sport outfit of tan plaid skirt with chamois jacket and vivid scarf . . .

One of the most impudent, a tiny papillon of Mrs. Deforest Danielson of Commonwealth ave., was the center of much amusement as it yipped at three admiring policemen . . . Mrs. Danielson has six of these dumb beasts at home . . . she was carrying three, one of which, Offley Coquette, is an English champion. Her costume of black trimmed with Persian Lamb and close fitting black hat was very chic . . .

In leopard skin, Mrs. Delphin Young of West Newton was exhibiting Beau, a well barbered French poodle which has been much in vogue this season at society fashion shows . . .

Miss Alice Ware was proudly posing with Sister Sue, her wirehaired terrier, in brown caracul coat . . . there were many cameras about snapping the canines and their proud mistresses.

Copley Society Plans Russian Cabaret

AN EVENING OF merriment and dancing in the form of a Russian cabaret is now being planned by the Copley Society to take place Monday, Feb. 12, at the society's house on Commonwealth ave.

Under the active direction of Mrs. Frederick H. Briggs and her entertainment committee, with Mrs. Thomas H. Frothingham and Mrs. Albert E. Rice, elaborate preparations are under way to reproduce the colorful interior of a once-famous resort of the Russian nobility.

Preceeding the two hours of dancing, a trio of entertainers, the Berestreffs, will appear in Russian songs and music. Gayly costumed young men and women will serve refreshments at tables.

In order to pictorially carry out the spirit of the occasion it is requested that those attending wear Russian costumes or evening dress.

Mrs. Youngman Heads Group

Mrs. William S. Youngman is honorary chairman of the patronesses committee for the fourth annual charity ball that is being given under the auspices of the Aquilo Club, the Junior League of the Swedish Charitable Society of Greater Boston, Inc., that is scheduled for Friday evening, Feb. 9, at the Hotel Somerset.

The following committee is working for the success of the affair: Erie West, chairman; John Granstrom, chairman of the tickets; Zelma K. Larason, chairman of the patroness committee; George Hallberg, charge of the publicity committee; Verner Nelson, Martin Paulson, Edith Olson, Alice Larson, Alice Nelson, Esther Engles, Sonia Stone, Alfred Lonnberg, and Herbert Engboig.

Baker Center Holds Coffee Party

ONE HUNDRED AND twenty-five guests overflowed the conference room of the Judge Baker Guidance Center at its coffee party yesterday.

Mr. Stephen P. Cabot, president of the Guidance Center, introduced Mr. Henry Parkman, Jr., who spoke first on the Emergency Campaign, then the Guidance Center demonstrated how at a conference of its staff, material obtained in the study of a juvenile delinquent and of a problem boy is brought together and interpreted.

As son as the demonstrations were over, the conference became a tea party.

Mrs. Harvey H. Bundy, Miss Frances G. Curtis and Mrs. Robert Homans, trustees of the Guidance Center, established themselves at the tea table, where Miss Nathalie Appleton, Miss Pauline deFries and Miss Ann Torbert, volunteers at the Guidance Center, dashed about with cups.

The bust of the late Judge Frederick P. Cabot by Korczar Ziolowski, recently placed in the hall of the Guidance Center was much admired.

On exhibition in another room were charming groups of sculptured figures recently executed for the Guidance Center by Miss Bashka Paeff to illustrate child guidance work.

TEMPLE BNAI MOSHE SISTERHOOD of Brighton announce that their first costume party will be held on Wednesday, Feb. 14 at the Beacon House, 1546 Beacon st., Brookline. The committee of arrangements urge the community to lend their support for this worthy cause.

Drive Groups to Gather

As the daily informative parties go on for the Emergency Campaign some of the hostesses have planned entertainment for the guests, other than the film and campaign speaker.

The Boston Tuberculosis Association plans a fashion show for tomorrow afternoon, when Mrs. Gelston King will speak at three o'clock at its shop at 122-A Newbury street. Gowns, hats and wraps by Charlotte Phillips, Inc., of Boylston st., and furs by W. V. Slocum will be modeled, as well as negligees designed and made at the Sheltered Workshop of the association, which is one of the participating agencies of the campaign.

Mannequins will be Miss Hilda Allen Miss Katherine Baker, Miss Jane Bogardus, Miss Mary Brown, Miss Polly Erlich, Miss Eleanor Jones, Miss Virginia Lamont, Miss Barbara Morton, Miss Peggy Tarbell and Misce Evelyn Weatherby.

Tea, as a change from the customary coffee, will be served after the fashion parade. Reproductions of antique furniture, designed with care as to correctness and detail, and stuffed animals and dolls and other attractive and useful articles made at the Sheltered Workshop also will be on display.

This Is Life

—By Robert E. Rogers—

HAVING JUST VIEWED Garbo's magnificent "Queen Christina," it occurred to me that, since we are about to be inundated with historical romances on the screen, it might be well to find out just how historical it is and how romantic. The quest was interesting.

It is not unfair to say that nearly everything in the film can be justified historically. Christina was the daughter of dead Gustavus, attaining the throne at the age of six; she was brought up in more or less masculine fashion and, later, reverted to men's clothing entirely. Her lovers were many and frequent, as the peasants in the inn hinted.

Motives Idealized

SHE DID REFUSE to marry her cousin and abdicated—at the age of 28. She went South. In addition, the film touches very lightly on a considerable influence in her life, her love of foreign literature and art, her rather distinguished culture and science. As for her rising early to study, it is said that such a regime ruined the health of the French philosopher Descartes, whom she had invited to her court. And in the film one actually heard the name Descartes, pronounced hastily!

In many respects, then, the film, however romantic, does not do violence to history. The motives are, of course, idealized, just Christina herself was idealized. Garbo was never more beautiful than in this film nor more in character. She was regal; she looked capable of ruling. That is how a queen should look. Unfortunately poor Christina was homely, dirty, uncouth, and peasantlike in her man's dress. She was a hunchback, and so lean that the French ladies derided her.

As for motives, she was jealous of Oxenstierna, her chancellor, and forced him to hasten the peace after the Thirty Years' War, thus losing much of the glory Sweden had earned. She had the brains to be another Elizabeth or Catherine II, but not the temperament. She loved herself more than Sweden, she was a conceited and self-centered blue-stocking always wishing to get out of Sweden and be honored as a lady genius rather than as queen. That is why she abdicated. She was bored.

Tragic-Comic

TREATED IN TERMS of bitter and realistic comedy the latter part of her life might have offered more material than the earlier—but hardly for a romantic film. She went, not to Spain but to Italy: renounced her Lutheranism and became a Catholic, baptized Alexandra, and there she held a kind of literary and philosophical salon, surrounded by cardinals. Her generosity was such that at one time she was supporting 400 persons and seriously wasting the provinces she had reserved to herself.

Then she tried France—unsuccessfully. She tried to teach Nazarin, cardinal and prime minister, her notions about statecraft, pacifism, and the like, but he was coy and cautious and saw to it that she was not invited to court again.

Her second visit to France was signalized by the merciless assassination of her Major Domo, a traitor to her interests. Legally, the right was hers, as the Swedish Diet had given her power of justice high and low over her immediate family, her lodgings, too, were technically Swedish ground, not French. But it is not a pretty story.

Thereafter the story grows tragic-comic. She repented of her abdication but when on her cousin's death she went back to Sweden and claimed her throne again, her people insisted that she sign a strange document. Long before they had decided that as a queen she was more a liability than an asset. Her literary preoccupations and eccentricities, her notorious amours, her renunciation of her father's faith were too much to bear. She set off a-wandering again. Her money began to give out and the Pope allowed her a pension. Once she applied for the vacant throne of Poland and was rebuffed. She lived well until the age of 63, a notorious, intriguing, ugly old woman, eccentric and egotistic.

Magnificent Part

I SUBMIT THAT for a great character actress—say, a Mrs. Fiske—there would have been a magnificent part. But Garbo is not a character actress. She is a romantic actress. And romantic actresses are not content with life as it is. They want it always prettified. I remember, for instance, that Maude Adams was always looking for a play in which Joan of Arc did not die at the stake. Something prettified in her, I fancy, forbade that. She wanted Joan to end victorious! Well, so she did, but not in quite so obvious a way.

Nevertheless Garbo's film, as it is, is a beautiful and stately affair. Its scholarship is above the average, both as to action and setting. It convinces you, as Laughton's Henry VIII convinced you. And the actress herself never played with more beauty and dignity nor with more intellectual intensity. One might say that Garbo's Christina is what Christina might have been, with all her great endowments, had her character matched her mind. Stubbornness and instability alike marked her. Otherwise she might have been one of the great queens of history.

And above all, one feels that one lives in the Stockholm of 300 years ago. The sense of authenticity at the coronation and abdication can hardly be put into words; other bits as well. The snow falls for three days, and in the night the torch-lit sledges gallop through the dark and narrow streets. In such scenes the films offer their greatest gift.

Letters I Would Love to Mail

—By J. P. McEvoy—

Woodstock, N. Y.
Jan. 1934.

DEAR Neighbors:

I am leaving you again and going back to sunny California, and if I hear you say once more, "Isn't that marvelous? Take me along," I will be tempted sorely to do so, and then you will be plenty sorry.

Always remember the old adage: "Be very careful about what you wish for, because you always get it." That doesn't sound snappy enough to be an old adage, but that's the general notion.

Any way, on the eve of my return to Hollywood I must break down and confess that I wish I didn't have to go. True, they have sunshine out there, and it is bright almost every day all day, while up in Woodstock it is gray one day and grayer the next, but when the sun does come out—Oh, boy!—it's like falling in love and getting a new suit of clothes at the same time.

* * *

WHILE out yonder in Hollywood, sunshine is the fixed smile you see on the face of a worried hostess when the party isn't quite coming off. On goes the smile as you come in the door; on it stays, getting more fixed and permanent.

Once in a while, when you least expect it, the strain becomes too much and she bursts into tears. That is the rainy season.

And the parties, dear neighbors! Ask me no more about Hollywood parties, with that sly sneer, as though you were going to hear something out of Suetonius. There is only one thing duller than a Hollywood party, and that is a party in Beverly Hills.

And as for drinking, dear neighbors, when I tell you that gin cocktails and gin in punch is still going on, need I say more? Need I tell you, kind friends of Ulster county, that they have no Apple in Hollywood—Apple, the Unquehagh of Ulster, the Mountain Dew of the Catskills. Ah, when I think of Repeal, with all its villainous blends and mashes, I weep for good old prohibition, with its smooth and mellow Apple.

* * *

PARDON the old maestro while he gets out the mouth organ and staggers off into song:

TO APPLEJACK
(Ulster County)

A Touching Tribute After Reading About the Elegant Drinking I May Have to Do Now That Repeal Is Here.

Oh! Apple is a peasant drink;
I like it.
A vulgar but a pleasant drink;
I like it.
It has no, how you say it, "flaire."
Has no "can" no "savoir faire";
But how it soothes you here—and there—
I like it.

It goes with this, it blends with that:
I like it.
Or walks alone like Kipling's Cat;
I like it.
Like Calvados to La Patrie,
Or Cuba Libre's Bacardi,
Is Applejack to ma Countree—
I'M FOR IT!
Weepfully,
J. P. McEVOY.

Reading and Writing

—By William Soskin—

THE impressive amount of dancing in the boulevards and the increased number of table reservations duly recorded by social historians last month were attributed quite correctly to the repeal of a noble experiment. If a goodly number of people are found today staging another ballet in the streets and shouting and waving objects that look remarkably like books, the celebration will be due to another repeal.

Today the American millions are presumably tasting their first draught of unadulterated, unabridged "Ulysses." Today the first American publication of the famous James Joyce work, made possible by the recent court decision of Judge Woolsey, is available in the book stores through the enterprise of Random House. I say presumably; because it is quite possible that James Joyce and "Ulysses" have come to mean very little in the literary life of the average American citizen. It is possible, what with all the censorship and legal and juridical fuss that has been made over the book, that it is now associated in John Doe's mind with such vaguely titillating subjects as picture post cards from Paris, ladies' silken garters and absinthe.

Cracks Up Old Style

IT is generally maintained by all the bright young men who discuss and analyze Trends and Movements in Modern Literature that James Joyce and "Ulysses" have had a greater revolutionary effect on contemporary writing than any other modern book. Some critics hold out for Marcel Proust, father of the stream of consciousness. Others for Andre Gide. Still others for the philosophical fiction of Thomas Mann. The general consensus, however, is for Joyce.

The author of "Ulysses," you are told if you attend the seminars, evolved a technical literary method by which the fancy psychological patterns of life today and the complex structure of modern man's environment could be adequately represented in writing. Writers of the past treated content with a realistic novel, a story that had its elements of surprise and suspense, and that alternated its dramatic incidents with a certain amount of description and casual dialogue. Joyce incorporated drama and description and emotional values in a new language that broke up conventional meanings of words and did away with the stereotyped logic of the old English novel.

Three or Four Words

WHY, if the importance of "Ulysses" is of so technical a nature, should the American public dance in the streets? What is the excitement for? Well, it seems that Joyce used three or four little words in the course of his fat book which are ordinarily described as Anglo-Saxon. Despite Joyce's decision that these words were part and parcel of the living scene around him, they were not used in the polite conversation of the upper middle classes.

The principle of the court victory by which the complete and original version of "Ulysses" is now available must be regarded as a good one in the interest of freedom of speech and of thought. Its practical effect, however, is to make a book which very few people have read all the way through, despite its importance in this history of English literature and criticism, available to thousands of people who will also not read it through.

Most of my friends have read the last chapter of "Ulysses" simply because it contains the most direct demonstration of the sensational channels into which Joyce's literary methods lead. Most of my friends have not read very much of the remainder of the book. Yet they can talk of Joyce and his masterpiece in erudite terms and demonstrate his effect on modern writing in such works as William Faulkner's "As I Lay Dying" and "The Sound and the Fury," F. Scott Fitzgerald's "This Side of Paradise," Edward Dahlberg's "From Flushing to Calvary" and a few others.

I happened to read "Ulysses" through because I was interested years ago in translating the drama of its group of Dubliners into a larger allegory, a Joycean philosophy of literature. I found most of the book quite dull despite its frequent brilliance of experimentation in word usage and in psychological effects.

A Number of Things

—By Charles Hanson Towne—

ABOUT a year ago it looked as if grand opera could no longer exist in New York. Finances were low, and even though all the singers were obliged to take decreases in their salaries, there was not enough money left in the exchequer to support so tremendous an enterprise. Abroad there is governmental control of opera. The State feels that it is necessary to support an art so definitely linked with the lives of the people. But in America grand opera is dependent, to a great extent, upon the patronage of the wealthy box-holders. The real music-lovers cannot afford the best seats in the house. If they go at all to the Metropolitan, they must climb the stairs to the gallery, they must wait in long queues to get even their humble reservations; yet they are willing to do this. They arrive on time. They see the first gesture of the director, hear the first notes of the overture, and are breathless when the curtains part.

But the trouble is that most people prefer to go in pairs to the opera, and two seats represent an outlay that not everyone can afford. Until, as Mrs. August Belmont has pointed out, the people begin to realize that the opera is theirs, it will not succeed; but it cannot belong to the people unless prices are reduced, particularly in these troubled times. If the opera is to remain a mere social gathering; if the golden horseshoe is to continue as a place of parade for wealthy exhibitionists, with the operas themselves only incidental, then we shall have something in the nature of a colossal joke on Broadway.

WHY it should be considered smart and chic to arrive long after the first act is one of those mysteries which will never be explained. In Europe people do not dine heavily, if at all, before they attend the opera. They go as if they were to partake of the sacrament of Art, and later they may wander out to a light supper. No diamond tiaras are stared at in small provincial towns, diverting the audience from the stage. There is only a passionate desire to listen to the music, to understand it, to rejoice in it.

I have known people in New York, who, in all their years of operagoing, have never heard the first act of "Tristan," and often they have neglected the last scene in every opera they have attended, hurrying out to get their motors. The Metropolitan is a place where a function occurs, and they go because it is "the thing" to do. Monday evening arrives, and with it a duty to be on hand, part of the general gaudy spectacle. A silly pretense is made that they enjoy what they have heard. In reality, they enjoy only being seen, and opera-glasses are turned, not to the stage, but to neighboring boxes to see what Mrs. Thingamabob is wearing. And the opera belongs, alas! to Mrs. Thingamabob, rather than to those intelligent listeners who sit so high above her beautifully adorned head. The tired little seamstress, the weary and worn librarian, the shabby clerk, the Italian musician from over on the Lower East Side—well, perhaps the great singers know that they are in the auditorium, and they pour out their arias to them, and forget Mrs. Thingamabob in her splendor and foolish pride.

* * *

WE HAVE all known school teachers who saved and scrimped for a month in order to hear "Lohengrin," and they heard every note of it, and took away something that Mrs. Thingamabob knows nothing about. The great composers wrote for the people, not for the wax effigies that stare at one another while golden sounds float up to the ceiling. One hopes for a time when the people will get what is theirs by every right.

Love Comes to the Senate

—By Frank Sullivan—

GERTRUDE STEIN, in a recent address in Paris, stated that "Republicans are the only natural rulers in the country (the United States). When a Democrat gets in he only does so because of the singular seductiveness which he possesses."

The leaders of the Grand Old Particle have been complaining recently that they had no Policy. Well, Gertrude has given them one. Let them take up the cultivation of seductiveness and beat the Democrats at their own game.

Seductiveness, however, will not come as easily to the Republicans as it does to the Democrats, mainly because the Republicans will have to reduce States like Vermont and Maine to seductiveness. If the Republicans expect to accomplish anything in the way of confounding, refuting, discomfiting they had better take a short cut and inject some ready-made seductiveness into their party. Therefore, let either Senator Simeon Fess of Ohio or Senator Dave Reed of Pennsylvania resign his seat in favor of Greta Garbo. Then, while Senators Fess or Reed are attending classes in seductiveness, Greta could go after the Democrats and show them what real seductiveness is.

* * *

LET us imagine a debate in the Senate on a bill to appropriate $324,000,000 for new cerebella for the Brains Trust. Senator Willop (Phen., Fla.) has just made an impassioned plea for the bill. The Democrats have a clear majority: the situation is desperate. The Republican whip, at his wit's end, sends Garbo in to speak against the bill, telling her to fight "for God, for country, and for Ogden L. Mills."

In that thrilling voice of hers, Garbo speaks. She tank she don't like dat bill appropriating $324,000,000 for dose new—what you call dem—for de Brains Trust.

As she speaks a kind of spell is cast upon the listening Senate, and even the Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee is heard to remark, "Gad, but Senator Garbo is beautiful tonight!"

But there is one who is perhaps more enthralled by her words than anyone in the Senate chamber. That man is Senator Willop, the very man against whom she has entered the lists. He listens to her words in a kind of dream. And then, as she leans forward to emphasize a point, her hair brushes his cheek. Her perfume, her proximity, somehow thrills him. Once again he is a Southern lad, handsome, young and with love's hot blood coursing through his veins . . . ah, memories!

* * *

THEN, suddenly, he knows not how, Frederick Willop ceases to be the Senator, and becomes just a man. He forgets the new cerebella for the Brain Trust. Somehow, they become a matter of, oh so little importance. Love is all that matters. Willop forgets the Administration, forgets the AAA, and the BBB, and the CWA, and the RFC, and, forgetting even the Senate rules, he clasps Senator Greta Garbo to him.

Her body against his, they are alone with Love in the United States Senate.

"Come," Willop whispers, hoarsely. "Ah'll take you-all out of this, little girl. We'll go some place togethah, where we-all can be alone for weeks and yeahs. We'll go to the Republican caucus room."

"Then you reelly lu' me," whispers Garbo winking at the Republican whip over Willop's shoulder.

"Ah never knew until now what Love was," Senator Willop whispers.

"Then proff it."

"How?"

"That $324,000,000 appropriation. Instead of buying new cerebella for de Brains Trust use it to buy whole new brains for de Republican National Committee," Garbo urges.

Love or duty, which? Garbo or Senator Lewis of Illinois?

Love wins and when, an instant later, the Chair says: "Does the Senator from Florida yield to Senator Garbo?" the answer comes firmly, "Ah do." Then, not to be outdone, the whole Senate yields to Garbo, and a motion to adjourn is made and unanimously passed.

Vagabondia

—By Bruno Lessing—

ROME—Back in the Eternal City and well rested. The trip from Naples took two hours and forty minutes, during which I had seventeen or eighteen grand snoozes. On a train I prefer a series of snoozes to a prolonged sleep. The succession of awakenings emphasizes the pleasure of sleeping. If you sleep all the way through you only get a kick out of it when you wake up at the end of the journey. But if your sleep is interrupted seventeen times you get seventeen kicks by dozing off and waking again. This may sound somewhat nutty, but what of it?

Found! Four Women

CAME upon a thrilling piece of news in an Italian paper. It was sent by mail from London, but I hope it was cabled to U. S., because it's more interesting and more important than meetings of prime ministers or talks on disarmaments. Prof. Eric S. Waterhouse, the psychologist, has declared that there is nothing mysterious or non-understandable about women. All women, he says, can be classified in four groups, viz:

1. The masculine type.
2. The worldly type.
3. The brazen-faced type.
4. The maternal type.

To the masculine type says he, belong such women as try to conceal behind a virile exterior an infinity of defects. In the majority of cases this attitude arises from the fact that, since girlhood, they strove to subjugate their brothers or companions. Under this masculine exterior they try to hide the weaknesses which they know they possess. The man who admires this type is, himself, more or less effeminate, and afflicted with similar weaknesses.

The worldly type is represented by those women who possess neither strong personality nor the defects of the other three categories, but who devote themselves to following the world's fashions and customs.

The brazen-faced type knows how to value all the advantages of their sex with cold cynism and the most refined calculation. These women know how to be bewitching in order to attain their end, but when they realize that it doesn't get them anywhere, they show their claws and grab at the unfortunate who happens to be at hand. Often, in society, they are quite gay and the lonesome man finds them adorable, but when they are isolated they become the veriest hag, precisely because they lack moral value.

The maternal type is the only one worthy of being taken into consideration. These women have no disposition toward the masculine. They are perfectly conscious of the task that nature has imposed upon them. In this group we find the happy women. Have you ever seen a mother with numerous offspring who was quarrelsome or harsh?

* * *

Make Up a New Type

I HAD to re-translate this from the Italian and it reads kind of jumbly, but I'm sure you get the idea. Prof. Waterhouse is a brave man. I agree with him about the masculine type—it's a bugbear of mine. But the other three divisions leave me kind of woozy. If the professor is right and the line of demarcation between those types is absolutely clear my hunch would be to take one of each, mix together, add a little sugar, shake well and then divide into three parts.

A pure specimen of any of those types would give me varying degrees of pain. A woman without the maternal instinct normally developed is a bit of a freak. A woman with no other interest in life than her craving for maternity is apt to be a bore and something of a shrew. She ought to follow the styles, look at herself in the mirror occasionally and have enough of the "brazen-face" to keep her husband interested.

I doubt, though, whether the professor is right. He draws his lines too sharply, whereas Nature does not seem to do that they never have been detected. Like the colors of the rainbow—you cannot tell where one ends and the other begins.

The more I think of it the more I'm sure the professor is all wet. He overlooks, among other things, woman's amazing capacity for change. Her wonderful adaptability. I'll tell you a story about one. She was a woman of the streets in New York, many years ago. A man I knew deliberately "picked her up." He associated with her for five years and then, despite the advice of all his friends, married her. I met the woman years afterward—before I heard the story—and found her one of the sweetest, most charming, considerate and accomplished women I have even come across. A devoted wife, a good mother, a delightful hostess. I felt like kicking the man who told me the story.

We're All Guessing

WE oldtimers wonder what kind of women you're going to have when this modern young generation grows up. Girls today lead a different and freer life than their sisters of the past ten generations. It's a much simpler life, too, not hedged about by so many rules and restrictions and traditions. Is it possible that when they become older and settle down they will fall into the predecessor's four categories? I'm more inclined to think they'll knock that list sky high.

They'll all have a touch of the masculine as the result of their craze for sports. They'll all have a touch of the worldly because they've been fed on the depression and have been brought up on dollars. They'll have to be more or less brazen-faced to beguile a young man into marriage because the modern young man seems to be quite a dumbbell. And the maternal instinct is not going to die out.

WAR PICTURES HAILED AS STUDY AID

Patrick T. Campbell, superintendent of the Boston Public Schools and one of the foremost educators in the country, today gave an unqualified and enthusiastic endorsement of the Floyd Gibbons collection of uncensored World War pictures, now appearing in the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

Not only did Superintendent Campbell endorse the pictures, but he urged that Boston school students carefully study these pictures, "that they may have a true picture of the World War and what present day warfare means.

AID TO STUDENTS

"A study of these pictures will enable the pupil to supplement the written account of the World War as given in his text books," declared Supt. Campbell," and will give him a truer account of what happened in Europe from 1914 to 1918."

These pictures, portraying war in all its tragedy, have already been praised by Boston's leading warriors. Gen. Charles H. Cole, who commanded the 52d brigade of the Yankee Division in France, Brig. Gen. Daniel Needham, head of the State Police, who also served in France with the 26th Division, Brig. Gen. John H. Agnew, adjutant general of the State, who served with the 26th, overseas, have pronounced these pictures the most authentic and realistic history of the World War that has yet been given the public.

Supt. Campbell—an educator—interested only in training the minds of boys and girls of Boston—a work to which he has devoted his entire life, praised these unusual war pictures from an entirely new point of view today.

TRUE STORY REVEALED

"In all our text-books on history, at least before the World War" said Supt. Campbell, "wars were pictured in glory and tinsel—the drum—the fife, martial music, the flags flying, the crowds cheering the hero on his return.

"We now know that that was a false picture. It is time the true story of the horror, the suffering of war should be pictured in its true light, in order that our boys and girls, the citizens of tomorrow, as well as their fathers and mothers may know, as nearly at first hand as possible, what war meant to the boys who went across in 1917 and 1918.

"These uncensored pictures now appearing in the Sunday Advertiser, taken on the spot, depict war as it actually is—a thing of horror."

The first instalment of these sensational war pictures appeared in last Sunday's Boston Sunday Advertiser. They will appear each Sunday—each instalment showing the horrors of war in all its nakedness—as well as presenting a graphic and unforgettable history of the Great War.

Threat of Slain Girl's Fate -:- Casts Gloom Over Dorchester Home

MRS. HEWEY LINA HEWEY

"OH, WHAT FATE HAS SHE MET?"

Mrs. Mildred Hewey, the mother, and Lina Hewey, the sister of Lorraine, missing and threatened in a note with murder by a maniac killer. (Boston American photos.)

HOUSE OF SADNESS NOW

Home of the Hewey family at 24 Freeman st., Dorchester, where word is awaited anxiously today as to the fate of Lorraine Anita Hewey, missing since Jan. 15 and threatened with death.

HER KILLER STILL HUNTED

Ethel Zuckerman, 18, the girl who was murdered and her body pinioned to the floor in a South End bakery. Her fate is threatened by the maniac killer to Lorraine Hewey, Dorchester school girl.

comparison before the search of the South End was ordered.

'I'M CRAZY KILLER'

Lorraine vanished on Monday morning, Jan. 15, following a weekend visit with a married sister in Norwood. Police have traced her as far as Forest Hills elevated station on that morning, when she was on her way to school.

The letter, which reached Mrs. Hewey at 11 o'clock this morning, was the first word bearing upon her possible fate and whereabouts. It was postmarked: "Jan. 25, 1 a. m., Station A, Boston." Station A is the South End post office in Washington st. The letter in full:

"I am going to kill your girl like I killed Ethel Zuckerman, because I am crazy. I am 36 years old, six feet two inches, blue eyes. I wear a gray suit, blue hat and black shoes, and I will kill her soon. I live in the South End of Boston, Mass."

There was no signature.

HUNT ON FOR MANIAC

The tone of the letter and the fact that inconsequential details were included in it, led police to believe that it might indeed have been written by an insane person, and, granting that, they had further to admit that the insane person had knowledge of Lorraine's whereabouts, or in some way had gained knowledge of her disappearance and her home address.

Lorraine left home on Friday night, Jan. 12, and went to Norwood to spend the week-end with her sister, Mrs. Clyde Small at 61 Hawthorne st. Her actions during her visit gave no hint that she was discontented with home or school life, or that she planned to go away.

RODE ON NORWOOD BUS

She remained in Norwood until early Monday morning, January 15, when she left Mrs. Small's home to call for a girl friend, Ada Campbell of Linden st., Norwood, on her way downtown to take a bus to Boston.

Police have determined that she did call for Ada and walked with her to Winter and Washington sts., Norwood. Ada did not see her take the bus, but the operator of a bus running between East Walpole and Forest Hills informed the police that a girl answering Lorraine's description rode with him that morning from Norwood to Forest Hills.

From that point on the trail was lost.

Under ordinary circumstances Lorraine would have taken a train from Forest Hills, changing at Winter st. for a Dorchester tunnel train.

The train from Forest Hills would have made two stops in the South End, at Dover and Northampton stations.

Lorraine had several pet goldfish and a bulldog, Buster. Buster has been grieving since her disappearance, the mother said.

Police were not greatly aroused by the disappearance before receipt of the letter today because, they said, Lorraine had expressed a desire to leave school and go to work.

Mrs. Hewey said, however, that her daughter was looking forward to working at the end of this school year and was contented to continue her studies.

The threat note contained two letters which police thought similar to letters in Lorraine's own hand. Mrs. Hewey disagreed.

The letter was sent to Station 6, headquarters of the search for Miss Zuckerman's slayer.

Instructions for a concentration of search in the South End were issued from headquarters by teletype and by radio to cruising cars through the Framingham state police broadcasting station after the letter had been flashed from Station 11, Dorchester.

PINIONED BY KNIFE

The murder of Ethel Zuckerman, 18, and pretty, was one of the most brutal and mysterious in recent years.

She was a clerk in the Bikofsky Bakery, Harrison ave., and there, about 10:15 on the night of Dec. 20, she was found dead on the floor, every bone of her head crushed by a weapon which has never been found.

Two knives had been used in the attack on her; one was shattered by contact with the skull bone over the forehead, leaving a strange cross-shaped wound at first believed of some significance. The other was driven through her throat with such force that its point was imbedded an inch in the floor.

There had been no robbery and no attempted criminal attack and the absence of any apparent motive finally led police to the definite belief she was slain by a maniac, probably a resident of the South End.

McCooey Rites

New York, Jan. 25 (INS)—Funeral services for John H. McCooey, the late Democratic leader of Brooklyn, were held here at the Church of Our Lady of Victory.

As Cell Door Yawns

John J. Donnelly was arrested today at his home on Commonwealth ave., on eight indictments charging jury fixing and corruption of justice. He was found in bed and taken to police headquarters, where this picture was taken by American staff photographer. Two other charges pending in Roxbury courts were discovered. Donnelly was accused in Supreme Court of being the "contact man" in jury fixing.

Missing Girl's Description

Here is the description of Lorraine A. Hewey, missing Dorchester girl:

Age—15.
Height—5 ft. 3 inches tall.
Weight—118 pounds.
Medium complexion.
Brown eyes.
When last seen she was wearing a short black plush coat, dark blue skirt, light blue sweater with green stripes, low brown shoes, brown cotton stockings, and red felt hat.

DALTON OUTLAW SURVIVOR HERE

"Any man who says he cannot come back doesn't want to come back. I have proven that. Surely it's a hard fight but it can be done. Contrary to popular notion, I find that the world is anxious and willing to help a man who is trying to come back."

Thus spoke Col. "Bob" Dalton, former outlaw of the old Southwest and sheriff of a Texas county, who is visiting U. S. Marshal John J. Murphy in connection with the latter's work of making President Roosevelt's birthday party on January 31 a success. He is the last survivor of the "Dalton Gang."

Dalton is one of the most colorful personalities of the Southwest. He was one of the "bad men" of the wild and woolly West of bygone days. He has a record of killing 39 men in his outlaw days in the early eighties. He has four gunshot wounds in the head and was at the point of death several times. He was to be shot at sunrise in one of the Mexican revolutions but was rescued by Mexican friends.

"I feel that my debt to society was paid at Leavenworth," said Dalton. "I was pardoned by Theodore Roosevelt when he was President. I used the slogan, 'Built on resolve the structure of my future.' I succeeded. I live on a ranch next to that of Vice-President Garner, with whom I played when a boy in Texas."

Dalton is 69 years old, jolly and carries his 230 pounds with vigor and assurance.

'Last Dalton' as 4-Gunner

Two guns in his hands and two in the mirror, Col. "Bob" Dalton of Texas, "the sole survivor of the notorious Dalton gang of outlaws," posed for this picture in the office of U. S. Marshal John J. HARRIMAN SEES DANGER IN U. S. JOBLESS AID

Baltimore, Jan. 25 (AP)—Henry I. Harriman, president of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, said today: "We may well look with apprehension to the future," if those now receiving aid from the government come to regard this assistance as permanent.

In an address before the Baltimore Association of Commerce, he said:

"As I see it, the problem is not whether this country can stand a debt of 31 billions of dollars, or whether it can raise 10 billions of dollars in the next six months; the problem is whether the President's program is one which is designed and carried out to stimulate private business in the capital industries, so that the millions of men who are now out of work may receive employment and earn their living without the aid of the government."

"If, on the other hand, those who are now receiving the aid of the government, come to regard such assistance as permanent, and if our unemployed are not rendered to work in private industry, then we may well look with apprehension to the future."

The speaker said he strongly believed it is the duty of the business men of the country to back the President's program, "with fair and constructive criticism, designed to make it effective.

Japanese Threat Foreshadowed in Canal

When the Dutch freighter Brion mysteriously foundered in the Panama Canal last Sunday, startling illustration was given to the Japanese war propaganda articles recently seized by the United States in Hawaii. In the articles, describing the next war with America, a translation of which was printed in the Boston Evening American, a spy blew up an American warship in the canal to block passage of the fleet. The Dutch ship, first to founder in the canal, was beached on Gatun lake. (International News Photos.)

jury returned the indictments against him last October.

At the Mayberry hearing, Mrs. Donnelly said that she had charged him with being a jury fixer and that she had seen him with jury lists in his hands.

This testimony, ultimately ordered stricken out, was given after several jurors had made Donnelly considerable of a mystery man through their testimony, so much so that each witness who mentioned a "Mr. Donnelly" was required to describe his appearance.

CALLED 'CONTACT' MAN

Donnelly is alleged to have been the "contact man" who offered certain jurors bribes, and he had also been sought on these charges by a special committee investigating jury fixing for more than a year before the Mayberry hearing.

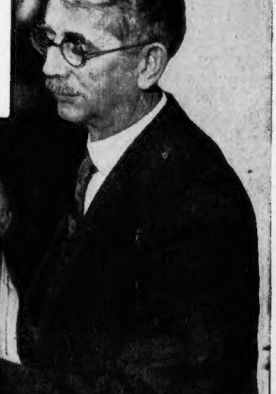
Atty. Mayberry, in his own defense at the disbarment hearings, testified that he never employed Donnelly in any of the cases in which jurors said they were bribed.

The attorney did say that he had employed a John Donnelly for investigation work only in about six cases over a period of 10 years.

During her testimony, Mrs. Donnelly declared that her husband never seemed to have a job yet apparently had plenty of money, although she rarely saw any of it.

School Head Urges Pupils to Study War Photos

Superintendent Patrick Campbell, of the Boston Public Schools, closely studies the Floyd Gibbons collection of uncensored World War Pictures now appearing exclusively in the Boston Sunday Advertiser. The superintendent today urged every school pupil in Boston to follow these closely as a graphic adjunct to the history of the World War as given in the Boston school text-books. Superintendent Campbell pointed out that in school text books pupils get a false picture of war. In the war pictures, all of which were uncensored appearing in the Boston Sunday Advertiser, the real horror of war is presented. These pictures present a graphic and unforgetable history of the World War. Since their first appearance these pictures have been acclaimed by the public. They have been praised especially by the boys who were "Over There" as the most accurate photographs that came out of France. They have proven to be the outstanding photographic headlight of decades.



NORFOLK CONVICTS USE PET PIGEONS TO FLY DOPE IN

Birds Also Speed Escape Plans Back to Coop, Officer at Colony Charges; Legion Probes Ouster of War Vet

By JAMES J. SMITH

Convicts at Norfolk State Prison Colony are using carrier pigeons to smuggle narcotics, an officer of the colny tld the Boston Evening American today.

Pigeons have also been used in at least one instance to complete plans for an escape, he charged.

"Conditions reported discovered at the Welfare Island penitentiary in New York and cited as the worst in the world are no worse than the conditions which have existed at Norfolk in the past, and exist there today," this officer of the colony declared.

"They tell about finding carrier pigeons at Welfare Island. Why, there are coops behind the Administratory at Norfolk right now, with 50 homing pigeons in them.

"The convicts breed them and have for a couple of years.

"Visitors come to the prison and take out pigeons with the explanation that they are presents from the convicts. Outside, dope is attached and their feet, they are released and fly back to their coops inside the prison.

"The dope is taken off them and distributed to the addicts among the prisoners.

"It's nothing unusual for us to see convicts walking around the colony charged up to the eyes with 'hop.'

"If the officials want to investigate this condition they can get the names of those convicts using the pigeons, and one of them holds a pretty good job at the colony.

"There isn't any doubt but that a pigeon was used in at least one escape planned by which 'Turkey' Joyce Moriarty and John MacRae made a getaway on September 26.

LAWYER TAKES HAND

"Plans for the escape were made during the visit of an outsider who was to send word when the get-away car would be ready and where. This outsider took a pigeon out and it came back—with the message."

Moriarty and MacRae have been recaptured. Moriarty, after a series of holdups, whileb randishing a gun at state troopers in a Springfield bus. He was given an additional five to seven years and is now in prison in Charlestown hoping for a transfer.

The state department of the American Legion and the civil service commission have become interested in the currenti nvestigation of conditions at Norfolk by State Auditor Francis X. Hurley and Commissioner of Correction Frederick J. Dillon, the American learned today.

OUSTED BY STARK

The interest of the Legion and the Civil Service Commission has been quickened in the case of Leonard C. Howe of Wakefield, a war veteran and civil service appointee who was a notch officer at Norfolk.

Howe was discharged by Supt Howard B. Gill on Jan. 23, the day before his six months' probationary period would have expired. He charges that Elmer Stark, a spare house and watch officer at the colony, had threatened he would have him fired if he took issue with any of Stark's methods of disciplining prisoners.

Stark is not a civil service appointee but was hired by Gill through the private employment agency, revealed in the American yesterday, in defiance of civil service regulations.

OUSTER EXPOSE LOOMS

The civil service commision has tried in vain to replace Stark. Now Howe has carried his story to the Legion and is seeking a civil service hearing which may air the whole matter.

Howe's removal is in line with other discharges of watch and house officers on civil service lists. These have occurred while officers hired by Gill outside the lists have remained undisturbed.

Auditor Hurley and Commr. Dillon it was learned, are at present considering their inquiry on two new charges involving the expenditure of $20,000 for improvements at Norfolk.

An appropriation of $10,000 for an ice cream manufacturing plant is under fire following a charge that machinery specified in the plans was not installed. Another $10,000 appropriation for construction on "the oval" where the colony officers are housed, is also under scrutiny.

Senior Hangs Self in Yale Frat Room

New Haven, Ct. Jan 25 (INS)—Classmates and police investigators were at a loss today to explain the suicide of John Stuart Bachman, 22, Yale senior, of Nashville, Tenn., whose lifeless body was found swinging from a rope in a narrow closet in the exclusive social property, Vernon House, of Psi Gamma Delta fraternity.

Yale authorities said Bachman could not have been worried by his scholastic standing and his fraternity brothers scoffed at a story that Bachman had been disappointed in a love affair.

The report persisted, however, from other questers that Bachman's engagement was to have been announced three weeks ago but that something had apparently gone wrong. Some of his classmates pointed to his deep religious nature and indicated there might have been a powerful motive for his act.

Dr. Frank P. Bachman and Mrs. Bachman, parents of the dead youth, are expected here.

Bachman's dead body was found by W. M. Lines, member of the club while searching for a book at 7:20 p. m.

The small closet is in reality a well leading to a trunk storage room above the fourth floor. A ladder runs up one wall. Bachman, who apparently had planned his act carefully, climbed this ladder, adjusted a hangman's noose about his neck and jumped into space. The fall failed to break his neck and he died a few minutes later of strangulation, according to Medical Examiner M. M. Scarbrough.

GOLD SHIPPERS KEEP SECRET

New York, Jan. 25—Six boxes of gold valued at approximately 50,000 pounds sterling (about $250,000 at the present rate of exchange) sent from London on the steamship Mauretania are here for reshipment to Vera Cruz, Mexico.

The names of the shipper and ultimate consignee were withheld by the Cunard Line, owner of the Mauretania, but it was stated that there was nothing unusual about the shipment which was one of several that has come from Europe destined to Central American ports within the past six months.

Whether the gold was in bars or coin was not shown on the manifest. Cunard officials stated. Considerable curiosity had been aroused by the arrival of the gold and reports were current that the metal was a portion of that recently purchased abroad by Reconstruction Finance Corp. Before its foreign gold operations were taken over by the New York Federal Reserve Bank as agent for the Treasury.

Federal Agents Pick Up New Bremer Clues

St. Paul, Jan. 25 (AP)—Federal operatives struck out on a new trail today seeking to solve the eight-day enigma of the kidnaping of Edward G. Bremer, held for $200,000 ransom, by running down the source of two anonymous notes, supposedly penned by the abductors.

Although the contents of the missives were not disclosed it was understood they contained instructions for meeting the kidnapers at their rendezvous for ransoming the son of the principal owner of the Jacob Schmidt Brewing Co.

One of the missives, unsigned was received Tuesday at the Minneapolis postoffice. The other was brought in yesterday. Both were collected from different mail boxes in that city in the regular course of routine. They were unstamped and addressed to Adolph Bremer, father of the missing man.

W. C. Robertson, postmaster, turned them over to Herman Hanni, head of the St. Paul office of the bureau of investigation.

Meanwhile, as hour after hour elapsed without any apparent word from the kidnapers, apprehension for the missing man's safety grew.

Close friends of the family were shaken at the failure of what they earlier had claimed was an impending contact with the gang, and were at a loss to explain why negotiations for his release had not reached a climax.

Bremer, 37-year-old president of the Commercial State Bank, was seized eight days ago, after he had left his eight-year-old daughter, Betty, at a school for girls.

THREATS SENT RICH FAMILIES

Philadelphia, Jan 25 (AP) It was revealed today by R. George Harvey of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice that letters demanding money and threats of harm or kidnaping have been received by members of 15 prominent families in Philadelphia in the last two months.

Harvey said two of the letters were in the same handwriting. All the recipients, whose names were not disclosed, turned them over to the Bureau.

A force of Federal agents has been recruited to track down the writers, Harvey said.

An Economical Car

built for those who want the power and pick-up of a V-8

AT normal touring speed, test runs show that the Ford V-8 for 1934 will give 20 miles to the gallon. It is not only an economical car—it is actually less expensive to operate than most cars with fewer cylinders. Here are some of the reasons.

1. The Ford V-8 is a high-compression motor—the type that uses fuel most efficiently.

2. The Ford V-8 has aluminum cylinder heads—which means that, although it is a high-compression motor, it can use regular medium-priced gasoline.

3. The Ford V-8 has less weight per horse power than any car we know of.

4. The Ford V-8 has dual manifolds and dual carburetion. You utilize every drop of gasoline.

5. The Ford V-8 has automatic engine temperature control. The engine operates at the correct temperature for maximum mileage on both gasoline and oil.

Before you buy any car at any price drive the FORD V-8 for 1934.

TIME NEED NOT DIM BLONDE HAIR BEAUTY -:- 'PLACE IN SUN' WRONG RULE FOR TROPICS

Here's Safe Way to Acquire a Glorious Aureole of Gold or Red-Gold

By Therese Deschamps

WHAT MAN doesn't admire and rave about shimmery golden blonde or glorious red hair? They call it enticing . . . kissable . . . Have you noticed how their eyes will follow a sunny head?

Blondes and redheads often rave about their tresses, too—but for a different reason. They realize its sunlit beauty is alluring, yet bewail the fact that light or red hair shows a disconcerting tendency to darken with the passing of the years. Unless shampooed and cared for properly, their golden or coppery "crowns" become dull, drab and faded looking.

If your hair is delicate in color and texture it's so important to use only a mild bland shampoo, and to rinse out every trace. Fair haired women should use warm, never hot—water for washing and rinsing their hair.

When hair has been repeatedly bleached, and feels coarse and dry, a final vinegar rinse will restore its soft, fluffy texture.

* * *

There are special shampoos which may be used to keep light hair a beautiful sunlit, golden blonde shade.

One such preparation has been the standby of both blondes and redheads for generations. In fact, one girl I know has used it for years—I can't tell you how many because she might see this—and thinks it marvelous. So after this test I can safely tell you its excellent. Not being a blonde, I couldn't try it myself for you.

She tells me this preparation makes blonde or red hair two or three shades lighter, but isn't a strong bleach or dye of any sort. It's a harmless herbal liquid made on a pure camomile base, and immediately makes dull, faded drab blonde hair satiny soft and lustrous. The same color it was in your "pigtail" school days.

It's equally good for redheads, too. Doesn't give the hair that ugly purplish tint you sometimes see after henna has been used. Instead, after a shampoo with this special preparation, red or auburn hair, which is losing its lovely reddish glints and turning brown, becomes its former lovely, coppery color again. And it isn't a dye, either!

* * *

You can get this special herbal shampoo liquid at several Boston stores, and it isn't any more expensive than ordinary shampoo preparations. If your hair has become a drab, dull faded blonde or you want to prevent this happening, write or telephone to Therese Deschamps, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq Boston. The telephone number is LIB-4000. If you write, please be sure to enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope, for a personal reply.

Beauty Questions and Answers

Cruise

Question: I'm planning to go on a southern cruise very soon with some friends. Can you imagine how thrilled I am about it? I've never been on a trip like that so I'm very anxious to have my skin look nice. What cosmetics would you suggest my taking along? My skin is normal, but slightly inclined toward dryness when I'm outside for long at a time. I will appreciate your help so much, Miss Deschamps.—Miss R. D., Boston.

Answer: I don't blame you a bit for being excited over your prospective cruise. Of course it's highly important to look your best on shipboard, and you'll be freshening up your makeup several times daily at least, so be sure to take along a generous supply of all the preparations you need.

In your beauty kit you should have plenty of cleansing cream, a good nourishing cream to protect and keep your skin from getting too dry, a soothing skin lotion, a mild skin tonic, your favorite makeup foundation, powder, rouge, lipstick (mascara and eyeshadow if you use them), toilet water, soap, manicuring things, and plenty of small cotton pads and cleansing tissues for removing and applying creams and lotions.

Attractive Hair

Question: My hair is brown, but becoming slightly faded and drab looking. I shampoo my hair very carefully, and wonder if there is some sort of rinse I can use to darken it slightly. I don't want to dye my hair, but just make it look a little darker.—Sue, Jamaica Plain.

Answer: Why not try one of the excellent harmless vegetable rinses on the market? They may be used safely and are not a dye, but can be shampooed out immediately if you like. They must be used after each washing of the hair. They can be obtained in a shade just matching the hair, or if you want it slightly darker, get a shade darker. I have the trade names of some of these harmless vegetable rinses if you'd like to have them.

Daily Suggestion for Self-Improvement

Most people resent having anyone continually pat, poke or touch them, while talking. In order to emphasize something that is being said,

Dates or Figs "Dress Up" Cereals

By MARTHA LEE

AGREED—THAT the children must have cereal in the daily menu. Some of the schools in Greater Boston have taken this matter of cereal so seriously that they make a list of the children who do not get cereal at least three times a week—and a letter is sent to the parents requesting that this important part of the diet be considered.

Probably the best way around the cereal question, is to make that dish so good, and serve it so attractively, that it becomes a pleasure to eat rather than a "must" to consume.

Raisins added to some of the cooked cereals give a new flavor—dates and figs—also add interest and nutritive value. Even muffins can contain cereal flours. And, are they good!

If the breakfast cereal has not "gone over" with the family with the required amount of success—try the following luncheon deserts. They are hearty, wholesome and—what is more important—very good.

BAKED CORNMEAL PUDDING

Scald 2 cups of evaporated milk with 2 cups of water, add ½ cup of cereal, and cook 5 min. In a double boiler, stirring all the time. Add ¾ cup of brown sugar, ½ tsp. salt and ¼ cup butter, cool very slightly and add slowly 3 beaten eggs. Add 1 cup finely chopped figs, pour into buttered pudding dish and bake uncovered like custard in a slow or 300 deg oven for 45 min. or until knife comes out clean. Serve with cream, or with butter. Serves 8.

DATE RICE PUDDING

Scald 3 cups milk in a double boiler, add 1-3 cup rice and cook until tender, about 45 min. Beat 2 egg yolks slightly, add 2-3 cups sugar and a few grains of salt, cook 1 min. Remove from fire, add 3-4 cup chopped dates and cool. Serves 8.

STEAMED OATMEAL PUDDING

Mix together one cup uncooked oatmeal, ½ cup raisins, 3 tbsp. corn syrup, ½ teaspoon salt and 2-3 cup milk and let stand about an hour. Add one tbsp. melted butter, ¼ teaspoon soda dissolved in a little hot water, 2 tbsps. dry bread crumbs mixed with 1 tsp. baking powder and 2 well-beaten eggs. Pour into buttered pudding dish and steam 1½ hours. Serve hot with hard sauce. Serves 6.

Pandora Tells You

DEAR PANDORA:

I am only 15 years old, and very fond of a young man who is 18. I don't go out with him much, for my mother thinks I'm too young, but we're really very fond of one another. He is very good looking, dresses well, and is really as nice a fellow as you'd want to meet, but there is one thing about him that I hate, and I simply don't know how I can stop that. He drinks, and on one occasion I saw him very much under the influence of liquor.

How can I break him of this habit, or do you think I ought to have nothing to do with him? Your advice will be very much appreciated. ANXIOUS GIRL.

DEAR ANXIOUS GIRL:

At the age of 18 I don't believe that you could really say that he had the habit of drinking, but it's certainly a very unpromising start. I'd simply tell him that if he's going to do anything like that you just don't want anything to do with him.

The best thing for you to do is to confide in your mother, who can probably help the boy as much as she can yourself. And don't think that it's going to be hard for you to get over liking this boy, for at your age that sort of thing is merely silly.

Mode of the Moment Shown by Well-Known Women

THIS DISTINGUISHED formal frock of silk tuny revers at bodice and is worn with matching canvas is worn by Miss Diana Wynyard. It has scarf jacket in tones of pale green, pink and a twisted strap decolletage at the back and white in square pattern. —Clarence Sinclair Bull Photo.

Diana Wynyard

THE EVENING ensemble I am wearing is interesting because of its unusual fabric. The frock is in silk canvas, very loosely woven and very soft. The color scheme of pale pink and green on white is shown in the huge plaid pattern.

When I wish to be a bit less formal, I slip on the loose jacket designed to give the effect of a cape at the back, with loose scarf collar that may be tied bich about the neckline. The pleated sleeves cut in one with the jacket also gives the illusion of a cape when the jacket is worn open.

With this ensemble I wear gold sandals and no jewels, as I feel the color and pronounced pattern of the costume are best without any added ornament.

Your Initials

A simple and not unusual bag will achieve a prized, made-to-order look with the addition of a circular initial frame like the one shown on a pin-seal envelope purse above.

The frame may be had in gold finish, silver finish and in gold and silver combinations, and you may fit in initials of whatever finish you choose. The initials snap snugly into the circular frame, and you may have two or three.

Dancing and Singing

By MRS. BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1—Please tell me if it is proper for a young man or girl to sing while he or she is dancing?

2—What should a young girl say to a man when he thanks her for the dance? Last week I read in your column that a girl should never say "You're welcome." J.

1—Singing or humming while one is dancing may not be exactly "proper," but I don't think that we should be too hard on these lyric souls who "can't help it." But their lyric "expression" should never be loud!

2—I'm sure that you will agree that "You're welcome" is a pointless and awkward reply to dance. Analyze it and you see that the girl is taking for granted that the delight of the dance was the man's only, and that she is being too-queenly in her response. What she should say is something that indicates that she too enjoyed the dance . . . "That was a delightful dance, Bob," or "I so much enjoyed that dance," or "It was delightful."

From Cotton to Velvet for Spring

By Annice Brink

IT'S NOT UNUSUAL for a fashion show to set me all agog, but when the audience itself puts up such a stiff competition to the show that my head veers wildly back and forth like a weather vane in a gale, then that IS something!

At a fashion luncheon in the hallowed precincts of Copley sq impertinent cottons, ingratiating satins and feathers, tweeds in luscious pastels and spring suits that had a first-robin air about them were paraded grandly on socially prominent models, but definitely failed to outshine a nice batch of mid-winter fashions in the audience.

* * *

An original Talbot model of the now-famous off-the-face hat with a pin-wheel cut halo showed the smooth forehead and hairline of one of the smartest debs. A black bagheera with short ruffled jacket showing a bagheera blouse of Chanel red was a mighty smart complement to the exuberant Talbot hat. She arrived in this outfit, and just before she ordered her luncheon, a hurry call from the sponsor of the fashion show was sent to her table. Would she model a gown or two in place of the society mannequin who had not appeared? About five minutes later she swung gaily around the tables in a lemon tweed coat, with an elbow-length cape (and there were at least five shown) edged with a band of blue fox. The matching off-the-face hat was tilted on the right side, a great deal more than her own square-set Talbot.

* * *

You girls with hazel eyes, especially if they are apt to have wicked green flickers in them, had better look to the sun-drenched Mexican shade that verges on currant red. Said red will make them sparkle so much that they will be actually chatoyant. A sports suit of velvet in this shade, belted in the sturdy Norfolk manner and offering patch pockets, appeared quite oblivious of its unusual material. Velvet in a sports suit is a very well-bred thing, make no mistake about that! With it was worn a navy blue plaid woolen scarf and a navy blue beret that had an endearingly funny peak on top.

* * *

Chalk crepes for daytime wear were much in evidence. One of pink had a short boxy jacket that had an amusing slit up the back in imitation of an overcoat. A very smooth brown was used as an accent in this outfit.

Dainties became sophisticated and acquired haughty red modernistic eyes in one of the black-background prints that will obligingly go South or stay here now and all through the summer. A brown background print with tiny green motif was used as a tie-back scarf on a mustard sheer wool. The belt worn with it was true emerald green.

* * *

Spontaneous applause—that will be echoed in masculine eyes, for it was that kind of a gown—rose for the blue satin evening gown with a huge lei of crinkled self-flowers thrown backwards until it reached the waistline.

Brocaded satin in very lady-like gowns has a delicious old-fashioned beauty that is far from sophisticated, although it is not L. W. (so you'll know hereafter, Little Women) in the least. The background is creamy, and shades of iris, blue, pink, yellow and green are so intermingled that you are aware only of the melty effect—like arpeggios played by a practiced hand.

Slacks and Ponchos to Use in Boiling Cauldron of the Southland

By Victoria Gaines

(Authentic last-minute fashions from New York—the style center of America)

SOMETIMES THIS PASSION for following the sun down South becomes an equal passion for avoiding it after you get there. Sun bathing is all very well, but sun burning, or even sun stroke, is quite another matter. Particularly in such hot spots as the West Indies, where the sun is so much stronger than in Bermuda, a little of it goes a long way.

Not for nothing does the Havana beach patrol parade up and down crying, "Let us warn you against the sun, senors and senoritas!"—a warning which sun-worshipers would do well to heed.

Plenty of people will be ready to rally around you with advice on how to get out and get under the sun, but precious few will tell you how to get out of it. For the benefit of those wise and wary travelers who look before they leap into the boiling cauldron of the tropics, we've collected a few tips on turning on the heat in the South—and turning it off again.

CHIC AND COMFORT

Beach shorts and bare-back bathing suits are swell, of course, after you're acclimated, but beach slacks and robes are better at first. To prove that you don't have to sacrifice comfort to chic, there's a grand three-piece set in Mexican red novelty silk-shirt, shorts and a robe that's roomy enough to wrap round your legs clear down to your ankles.

And one of the best bets for southern cruisers is something that the French have been using for years on the Riviera—a huge poncho of Turkish towelling that dries and covers you at the same time. It's thrown on over your shoulders as soon as you step out of the ocean, to prevent that sudden, swift burn that salt water attracts to the skin.

Broad-brimmed beach hats of straw or linen are practically a necessity—and the bigger and floppier, the better.

For those of you who want to get the sun in your hair, but not on your nose, there's a new crownless beach hat of printed linen with a huge brim held on by a head band. It's perfect for blondes who like the bleaching effect of the sun on their tresses, but not its blistering effect on their usually sensitive skins.

COOL CORK SANDALS

And if you had visions of yourself romping about the beach bare-footed, remember that southern sands are quite different from northern ones. You'll be burned to a crisp if you don't wear some sort of protective footwear—and a light, cool cork sandal is best for this purpose. Then there are many women who cover their shoulders and legs assiduously from the sun, and forget all about their hands, returning with sunburned paws that contrast oddly with their lily-white complexions. Cotton mesh gloves will prevent any such catastrophe, besides being cooler and more comfortable than the all-fabric ones.

Best of all, perhaps, is the advice of one veteran voyager—15 minutes in the sun the first day (or less than that in truly tropical climates) and five minutes more for every extra day.

ARMY WAR PLANS ARE BARED BY WOODRING

Washington Jan 25 (AP) One of the War Department's secrets was brought partially into the open today with a statement by Asst Secretary Harry H Woodring that President Roosevelt's creation of emergency agencies closely paralleled the army's "contemplated setup for industrial mobilization."

Woodring's prepared address before the Women's Patronage Conference on National Defense by correspondence followed disclosure of a move on Capitol Hill to have the army and navy "take Congress into their confidence" on secret plans for defending the nation in case of attack.

ASKS ARMY SECRETS

Chairman McSwain of the House military committee planned to ask the rules committee today for a preferred status on his resolution for congressional survey of the defense system. He explained it was the duty of Congress to maintain a sizable army and navy, but that without insight into official secrets Congress could not act.

Yet in the women's conference today, Woodring made partial disclosure of the army's proposed plan for mobilizing industry in the event of war or crisis. Woodring explained the industrial mobilization plans were designed to prevent profiteering, sabotage or such actions as accompanied the purchase of supplies at the start of the World War.

SURVEY 15,000 PLANTS

Wooding said the department's planned war economy system would be given to the President if it was needed. Citing one instance of the thorough detailed work that had been done he said 15,000 industrial plants had been surveyed and informed what items they would be required to furnish.

The assistant secretary of war asserted the United States now has "a higher degree of industrial preparedness for war than ever before. Man power and munitions, however, he reported as cut far below national needs.

JAP NAVY PLEA FALLS FLAT

Washington Jan 25 (INS) The government will view with disfavor any official proposal for an increase in Japan's naval ratio. Furthermore, the United States intends to proceed with the naval building program for which appropriations already have been made irrespective of what proposals Japan may put forward.

This was the response of American officials today to the announcement of the Japanese Foreign Minister Koko Hirota that he intended to approach the United States to discuss naval issues which will come up within the next two years with the expiration of existing naval treaties.

Although no communication has been received from the Japanese government, the Far Eastern empire has let this government know informally it desires an increase in its naval ratio. Tokio reports have stated Japan intends to withdraw from the Washington naval treaty unless granted a higher ratio.

Secretary of the Navy Swanson declared some time ago he considered Japan was granted fair naval power under existing treaties and he would oppose any increase.

Asiatic War by July, Says Ratcliffe

That Japan with one of the most modernly equipped and up-to-date armies in the world, will wage war with Soviet Russia within six months was the belief expressed today by S. K. Ratcliffe correspondent for the London Observer and spectator.

Ratcliffe who delivered a lecture yesterday before the "School of Politics" at Radcliffe College, Cambridge as the guest of the Massachusetts League of Women Voters, the Cambridge League of Women Voters and Radcliffe College, explained that the time element makes it necessary for Japan to declare war very soon if at all.

"Japan knows that if she must strike at Russia she must do so immediately, while the Soviet Union is in a weakened military condition," the speaker said.

U. S. TARGET IN TOKIO CRISIS

By GEORGE W. HINMAN, JR.
Universal Service Special Wireless

Paris, Jan. 25.—A double-purposed campaign to involve the United States and American prestige for their own political ends is seen authoritatively here today in the efforts of France and Russia to keep the United States in the spotlight of the Far Eastern crisis in which Japan plays the lead.

In the words of Henry Berenger, former French Ambassador to Washington and now chairman of the French Senate's foreign affairs committee:

"What is happening between Japan, China, Russia and the United States is inseparably connected with what is happening in Germany and Eastern Europe."

Briefly, the purposes of the campaign under examination may be summarized as:

1—Soviet Russia, hoping to restrain Tokio's ambitions Asiatic program, is doing her utmost to convince the Japanese that Russia has the United States with her; and

2—France, seeking through Russia to fortify her position on the Continent vis-a-vis Germany, is anxious to strengthen Russia in Europe and simultaneously to utilize Moscow to bridge the gap between Paris and Washington.

Railroad Plot in Truck Bill Charged

Washington, Jan 25 (AP) The Rayburn bill to regulate motor carriers was denounced to the House Interstate Commerce Committee today by the American Trucking Associations, Inc., as legislation sought by the railroads to drive trucks out of business.

Judson C. Welliver of Philadelphia, declared the railroads, fearful of the inroads of trucks on their monopoly, had been largely unsuccessful in getting such legislation through state Legislatures and now sought this federal law to "hamstring" motor competitors.

MODELS STIR THOUSANDS AT SHOW

With the Automobile Show open to the public upon its last week days of exhibition today crowds in front of exhibits and promenade passageways continued to throng the great auditorium to view one of the most revolutionary changes in the auto industry on record.

Subdued gasps of admiration were the order of the day as men and women saw for the first time what longtime motor manufacturers and body builders have done in streamlining in science—and war for speed and more speed.

Artists' sketches, clay models and renderings turned upside down were everywhere in evidence. And scores of alert salesmen were on hand, too, with order books ready. That there was no lack of buyers was indicated when these same salesmen refused to take time out for their meals, preferring to fill order blanks.

Of no less interest was the display in the basement of the Mechanics building of a portable broadcasting station built on a truck chassis. This exhibit was shown by the state police and visitors to the show were permitted to hear low wave length messages being broadcast from the police barracks to radio cars upon the streets of Boston.

The accessory department and the display of reconditioned cars also came in for their share of attention.

$3,000,000 to Aid Poor on Nazi Day

Berlin, Jan. 25 (AP)—Festivities will be taboo on the first anniversary of Chancellor Adolf Hitler's advent to power January 30. Instead the propaganda ministry announced today, a nation-wide day of relief will be observed.

Fifteen million marks (about $3,750,000) worth of food tickets and 8,500,000 marks ($2,420,000) of coal tickets will be distributed.

COLD NIPS SHINES OUT OF 265 MONKEYS

Monkeys—quite a bit of a shock today were they—were landed in Boston from a steamer and were started over the road by van for New York.

The monkeys numbered 265 and constituted the survivors of a much larger number which left Calcutta, India, on the British steamer Comliscan for delivery to buyers in the United States.

Many of the monkeys died en route to the United States, the cold weather taking heavy toll via the pneumonia route.

Because they are due in New York on Saturday to fill contracts for their purchase, the survivors were unloaded here and placed in a baggage car for the trip over the road.

A wide-spread and excited was their chattering when the van was sighted. On the van conveying the cold and pneumonia survivors was a huge sign:

"Refrigerated Service."

NEW PRICES SET ON CHRYSLERS

Prices for the Chrysler line for 1934 were announced by S. W. Munroe, sales director of Chrysler Sales Corporation before 500 New England dealers and salesmen in convention at the Hotel Statler yesterday, as follows:

Chrysler Airflow Imperial Eight sedan, body styles $1495, Chrysler Airflow Eight all body styles, $1295, Chrysler Six business coupe, $725, rumble seat coupe, $775, brougham $795, four-door sedan, $795, convertible coupe, $840.

"Naturally we are very pleased at the interest aroused by our new cars at the Boston Automobile Show. Many orders have been taken here in Boston and orders are coming in to the factory in an unprecedented rate from all parts of the country," he said.

"Our dealers everywhere say that they are being swamped with inquiries regarding the Airflow Chryslers."

J. R. Lakin, New England branch manager for the Chrysler Sales Corporation, presided.

Dodge Lighting Cuts Hazards

By WILLIAM MURPHY
New England District Manager Dodge Motor Corp.

Among the safety elements provided in the new Dodge models are designed to reduce night-driving hazards is a new method of control of "asymmetric" headlighting.

The headlamps of the new Dodge employ a new type prefocused bulb said to require no after adjustment. The main beam of these bulbs, instead of pointing straight ahead, are so set that the beam of the left lamp illuminates the right side of the road while the beam of the right lamp points toward the left.

When the driver of a similarly lighted Dodge meets a car approaching from the opposite direction he simply dims his lowers—both beams below their horizontal plane. He just drops the right hand beam which normally points toward the other car.

The left hand beam retains its full intensity. By continuing to light up the ditch side of the road it not only relieves the other driver of glare, but lights up enough territory ahead so that neither car has to drive into a dangerous "black spot."

AUTO SALES UP FOR KAYSER

Robert B. Kayser, president of Commonwealth Chevrolet Company, 949 Commonwealth ave., one of the leading Chevrolet dealers in New England, in an interview today expressed himself as greatly pleased with the outlook for the coming year.

R. B. Kayser
Bachrach Photo

Mr. Kayser established the present company in September, 1926 at the present location and while it has expanded its facilities and operation space he has maintained continuous ownership.

Before coming to Boston Mr. Kayser served as assistant general sales manager of the Chevrolet Motor Company in Detroit. It is therefore, with many years of executive automotive experience that ranks Mr. Kayser as one of the outstanding automobile figures of New England.

He heads an efficient, very active organization in the Commonwealth Chevrolet Company, which under his personal guidance has grown to a group of over 50 people.

"We have already taken twice as many advance orders to date as we had last year," said Mr. Kayser, "and every indication points to a banner year."

Auto Future Bright

H. L. HORTON

H. L. Horton, regional sales director of the Chevrolet Motor Company, arrived in Boston today to visit the Automobile Show. Interviewed at the zone office he said:

"Based on the attendance and sales records established at the New York, Philadelphia and Boston Automobile Shows, the business trend is decidedly upward and very encouraging.

"The stabilizing influences of the past few weeks, together with the fact that immediately following the announcement made by the Chevrolet factory this week that hereafter Chevrolet dealers would quote only actual delivered costs instead of the conventional f.o.b. prices on new cars and trucks, caused an instantaneous public response expressed in terms of orders for retail delivery."

CURLEY FATE, GOVERNOR CHOICE TO BE TOLD AT DINNER

HUSBAND LEFT AFTER 6 WEEKS, SAYS BRIDE

Mrs. Bluestein Says Silver Taken From Home by Spouse

Mrs. Mae G. Bluestein, 22, daughter of a wealthy Lynn coat manufacturer, has been awarded a divorce decree nisi in Probate Court at Salem, but will get no alimony because she "bragged about her wealth."

Judge Edward B. O'Brien granted her the decree from Albert Bluestein, who married her on the honeydaughter" only seven months ago.

She said they went out for a walk on the night of Nov. 7, and when they returned she found all her husband's clothing gone, as well as a silver cocktail shaker and other articles of silverware. She said her husband told her his family had played a trick on them.

She continued that he then wanted to take more things from the apartment and that when she resisted he struck her and she fell unconscious to the floor.

She said they had quarreled over money during their married life, her husband wanting money all the time for his relatives. She said he was silent when she asked why he had married her and if he loved her.

The divorce suit was filed by Mrs. Bluestein last fall on the ground of cruel and inhuman treatment. The husband opposed the suit but the decree was granted by Judge O'Brien after he had heard the evidence.

Mrs. Bluestein testified they were married last June, and six weeks later, her husband caused her to become estranged from him. They later became reconciled and took up their abode in an apartment in Franklin, st., Lynn, until last Nov. 7, when they became permanently separated, she said

Girl Dares Guns, Saves Cash

MISS ETHEL KATZ — MRS. COHEN

Guns and bandits and holdups are all in the day's work for Miss Katz, 20, of Normandy st., Roxbury, switchboard operator at a box factory in Massachusetts ave., Roxbury. She frustrated the attempt of two armed bandits to steal the payroll and kept them occupied until the money could be given out to the workers by the cashier, Mrs. Pauline Cohen, in the next room. Then the bandits fled empty-handed as Miss Katz received the praise of Mrs. Cohen and other workers. (Boston American photo.)

$62,000 PUSHES DRIVE NEARER ITS GOAL

Housserman Will Talk on Radio Tonight; Waiters Aid

Goal	$3,500,000.00
Total to Date	$1,121,791.13
Still Needed	$2,377,208.87
Days to Go	23

A total of $62,884.93 in donations reported today brought the Emergency Drive a step closer to its goal. However, more and more donations like three new anonymous gifts of $5,000, $2,500 and $1,500 must be received in the next three weeks if the quota is to be attained.

Outstanding gifts reported today were $2500 from Mr. and Mrs. Henry Cabot, Jr., $2000 from Miss Mary Lee Ware, $2000 from Dr. and Mrs. John W. Bartol, $1100 from Mrs. Everett Morse, and $1000 from Mr. and Mrs. Charles K. Cobb.

Almost the first of today's checks came from the waiters of the Parker House dining rooms. It was presented to Mayor Mansfield, chairman of the labor committee, by Stanisbury M. Hoxter, long famed as head waiter at the hotel.

TALKS OVER RADIO TONIGHT

Over the airwaves tonight the people of New England will be told salient facts concerning the campaign.

Oscar W. Haussermann, vice-chairman, will speak from Station WBZ from 7.45 to 8 o'clock.

"Why a Fund Campaign," will be among the points discussed by the speaker. He will also explain "Why and How the Goal of $4,500,000," and the question regarding government and city relief in connection with the appeal.

Mr. Haussermann is to stress the fact that subscriptions paid in installments are welcomed; particularly if they total more than paid up donations.

LABOR LAUDS CAMPAIGN

Organized labor has joined whole-heartedly in the campaign the Central Union of the Elevated, with a membership of 6000, are already collecting donations. In addition, 4000 employees, who are union members, have voted to contribute one-half day's pay each for five months.

Arthur H. O'Rourke, of Boston & Albany credit union, has been appointed chairman of a committee representing the railroad employes of the New Haven and the Boston & Albany, which will work for the campaign. Harry E. Burroughs is executive chairman of the labor division of the drive.

CHICAGOAN HELD IN PASSING OF BOGUS $100

Shows Bruise of Arrest, Resistance at U. S. Hearing on Bail

With a severe bruise on his forehead as a result of [illegible] waged against five opponents during his arrest last night at the Boston airport, William Lardner, alias O'Connor, Caplin and Kaplan, appeared today before U. S. Commissioner Edward C. Jenney.

He was charged with passing a bogus $100 bill, and was granted a continuance to Feb. 1, when he asked a week's time to obtain counsel. The commissioner indicated he would vacate the order before that date of Lardner obtains a lawyer and wants a hearing.

Because it was feared friends of the man might attempt a brazen courtroom delivery, he was handcuffed to Deputy U. S. Marshal Christopher Ghiloni during the hearing. The room also was closely guarded by secret service men and police officers.

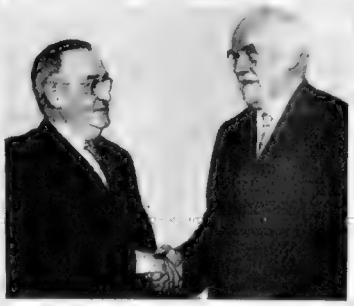
Asst. U. S. Atty. William McCarthy told Jenney that Lardner was a notorious crook who had jumped bail of $15,000 in Chicago after being sentenced to 10 years imprisonment in a state court.

Lardner mumbled when asked whether he had a criminal record, but finally admitted he was the defendant in the Chicago case.

McCarthy asked that bail be made so high it would be impossible for the man to follow his usual plan of having it reduced to a point where he could "jump" it. Jenney, therefore, set it at $25,000.

Lardner was arrested after an alleged accomplice attempted to purchase two tickets from the American Airways with the bogus bill. He was staying in a downtown hotel.

'War Is Over,' Says Hultman



WILLIAM P. HICKEY — EUGENE C. HULTMAN

"The war is over," declared Police Commr. Hultman as he shook hands today at Young's Hotel with William P. Hickey, who succeeded Joseph F. EX-MAYOR MAY GO TO PWA OR PHILIPPINES

McCormack, Granfield Gubernatorial Booms Due for Launching

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

[illegible] former Mayor Curley, set for next Saturday night in the Copley-Plaza Hotel, which will be attended by a sizeable delegation from Washington, may remove the wraps from aspirants within the Democratic ranks for state office.

With Governor Ely definitely out of the race, all that is preventing the contest for the Democratic nomination for the top of the ticket from shaping up is the status of the former mayor of Boston.

The Curley festivity has caused a feeling of suspense within Democratic ranks. There is a strong undercurrent of thought that Mr. Curley's future may be decided at this gala affair; that the long-expected announcement will be made that Curley has been placed by the national administration.

PHILIPPINES OR PWA

The expectation has even reached the stage where guesses are being heard. Some of the forecasters close to Washington gossips-to, say they won't be surprised if the former mayor is tendered a directorship of the PWA for the next two years, while others are hinting that there may be a shift which will see him going to the Philippines as governor-general, and former Mayor Murphy of Detroit, present governor-general, going to Washington as an assistant to the Secretary of the Treasury.

Should one of these developments take place next Saturday, it will cause a big sigh of relief to go up to the Democratic circles. With the former mayor no longer footloose, or in other words, out of the local political picture, announcements of candidacies for the nominations for governor and lieutenant-governor will be quickly made.

McCORMACK OR GRANFIELD

Among those watching the situation closely are State Treasurer Charles F. Hurley and Chairman Joseph W. Ratzell of the state emergency finance board, two officials regarded as outstanding aspirants for the governorship nomination. Both will undoubtedly be started for many others, including Congressman John W. McCormack of South Boston and Congressman William Granfield of Longmeadow.

On the Republican side, the reported availability of Dr. A. Lawrence Lowell, former president of Harvard, for the G. O. P. nomination to oppose Senator David I. Walsh is apparently not causing any deep excitement among leaders. The age of Dr. Lowell, 77 it is pointed out, would almost preclude him from making the vigorous battle that a Republican must be able to make if he is to stand a chance of beating the popular Democrat.

The name Lowell, of course, will stir up memories of the days of reciting the great names of men who have been Massachusetts senators, but as a practicable matter the giving of the G. O. P. nomination to the ex-Harvard head would be interpreted more or less as an admission of defeat. Hope for capturing this post, it may develop, however, that Dr. Lowell will go up to the G. O. P. rostrum in their despair as the "ideal sacrifice."

Police Agree to Wage 'Gift' as Devir Cites Scales

When Malden police informed Mayor Devir that they could not afford to make a voluntary 10 per cent contribution from their wages, as requested, the mayor was ready for them. It developed that he had surveyed salaries paid in Massachusetts cities to all department heads and was surprised to find that Malden salries ranked high.

He informed Malden officers that after they had contributed 10 per cent of their pay, they would receive $2002.50 per annum each, whereas in Boston the police receive, after their contribution, $1785 net and the Metropolitan police $1800 net after their cut. He also read a long list of other cities where the pay was lower than Malden.

After this, the mayor gave the average pay received this year and informed Malden officers that they would receive, with the cut, about $200 more than the average policemen.

A majority of the policemen signed for the voluntary contribution after the mayor's talk and it is believed that all will sign within a week.

LYNN LOSES IN LAND SUIT

Judge Charles T. Davis of the U. S. Land Court today ruled that Siuice Pond and the land under it belonged to the U. S. Leather Co., of Lynn, and not to the City of Lynn.

City Solicitor Patrick F. Shanahan said that until he digested the 50-page decision he was undecided on an appeal from the ruling.

The leather company and other abuttors had paid taxes on the pond for 44 years until five years ago when the leather company asked the pond and claimed it exclusively.

Ping Pong Play Keeps Co-Eds Slim

King Diet is dead! Long Live King Ping-Pong!

Dozens of Boston University students have discarded diets to reduce with the latest collegiate craze.

Brawny football men, corpulent from winter's inactivity, are tuning mind, muscles, and mental alertness with daily workouts at pingpong. Co-eds play the pastime with an eye on keeping slim. And even professors refresh themselves by slapping the celluloid ball with a flat paddle across a sagging net.

3 DETAINED IN THEATER DEATH

Autopsy will be performed today on the body of Theodore Armstrong, 62, of West Canton st., South End, who died last night after being found unconscious in the washroom of a Washington st. theater.

Police are holding three youths, pending the autopsy.

Lew Carroll, of Harrison st., Roxbury, brother-in-law, told police the victim had suffered from heart trouble.

JUDGE ENJOYS LIFE AT 82

His 82nd birthday behind him, Judge Robert Grant set out for his office today for his usual business day, in his own words, "looking forward with zest to the remaining years of my life."

The judge celebrated his birthday without any formal ceremony yesterday. A quiet family party at his home in Bay State rd., Back Bay, after his usual day's work at the office was the only outward observance of his anniversary.

Judge Grant, who is the author of numerous books, is still actively interested in literature and spends much time in writing. He is at present engaged in writing his memoirs. In spite of this work he still manages to spend three or four hours each day at his office.

Girl Operator's Nerve Balks Roxbury Bandits

A soft answer turneth away wrath but in the opinion of Miss Ethel Katz, of Normandy st., Roxbury, switchboard operator at the Paris Paper Box factory, Massachusetts ave., that district, a wisecrack turneth away the bandits and saveth the payroll.

Miss Katz was receiving the plaudits of her fellow workers today for the cool way in which she handled two bandits who entered the plant and attempted to steal the $1000 payroll.

To all, however, she calmly declares that it was nothing and that anyone would do the same thing.

The would-be bandits entered the plant office just after 5 p. m. while employes were being paid in an adjoining room. They demanded the payroll from Miss Katz and she informed them it had been distributed in the morning.

The manager, Ben Nigrosh of Brighton; his brother, Solomon of Dorchester, and an employe, Frank Bonfiglio of South Boston, took their cue from this and replied the employes had been paid in the morning when questioned by the bandits.

Miss Katz was threatened with death but insisted on her story and exchanged quips for threats. Baffled the pair finally fled just as Mrs. Pauline Cohen, who had been distributing the payroll, returned to the office. The bandits made their escape in a stolen car, which had been parked outside the office, driven by a third man.

'VEIL' DANCERS FREE ON BAIL

The sequel to the "Dance of the Seven Veils," as performed by seven young women in Repertory Hall, Huntington ave., Back Bay, last night, was staged today in Roxbury court before Judge Timothy J. Ahearn.

It consisted in the acceptance of pleas of not guilty from the four men, charged with the promotion of the show, and from the girls and their pianist, Anna Sheridan, who were accused of participating in an immoral performance. The dancers themselves were also charged with open and gross lewdness. The case was then continued until February 7.

They were booked as Ciara Conti 21, of Carver st., South End; Helen Kelly, 27, of Walnut pk., Roxbury Vivian Lee, 24, of Clarendon Hotel; Mamie White, 25, of Carver st.; Helen McKenzie, 24, of Massachusetts ave., South End; Mrs. Anna Sheridan, 32, of High st., Roxbury, and Ramona Fiori, 21, of the Commonwealth Hotel.

All were hailed in $500 each, with the exception of Jacobs and MacDonald, whose bonds were set at $1000 and $300 respectively. Jacobs was also charged with the sale of immoral pictures.

ARREST BARES TAX RACKET

A tax-abatement "racket" was laid bare today with the arraignment of John A. Cole of 2067 Commonwealth ave., Brighton, in municipal court.

He was charged with larceny on two counts of $180 each from Adelaide Melchione of 206 Endicott st. and Rose M. Bench of 169 Washington st., North.

After he entered a plea of guilty, Special Officers Robert Bowes and Hagen Chalmers told the court that these women were just two of many whose complaints are now under investigation.

According to their stories, the officers said, the women were taken to real estate offices near City Hall. There they filled out applications for tax abatements and paid a deposit. The expected tax cuts never materialized.

Cole said that he gave half of the money he collected to John MacDonald, a real estate operator and former member of the Legislature. The latter, however, was in court to deny this vehemently. He said he had met Cole in business circles but never received a cent from him.

The case was continued, pending the outcome of a larceny case against Cole in Middlesex County.

Monument Visitors Show Sharp Decline

Whether or not its the depression, the lamming fact is revealed that the number of visitors to Bunker Hill monument is decreasing. Only 25,000 climbed the stairs last year, according to figures just made public.

Frank W. Kennedy Dead

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 25 (AP)—Funeral services will be held Saturday for Frank W. Kennedy, 58, vice president and general manager of the Delaval Steam Turbine Co., banker and clubman, who died last night at his home, Delavua Manor.

1 From 17 Beer Kegs Leaves 15

When a delivery truck stops with 17 barrels of beer, and when one barrel is removed for delivery, and when the driver finds only 15 barrels left, there something is wrong. That was what brought William Glynn, 30, of Brnfield st., Dorchester and Thomas Kelly, 28, of Parker st., Roxbury, into Dorchester Court today. The pair were held in $1000 each for one week. They are suspected of stealing the missing barrel.

Purcell Milton Tax Assessor Candidate

John B. Purcell, Milton realtor announced today that he will be a candidate for the office of assessor at the Milton election in March.

BULL HOPES FOR ELY PARDON

Hope that his life may be saved today bloomed in the heart of Henry Guy Bull, who was granted a respite until Feb. 19 on his sentence of death for murder of a Greenfield policeman.

Gov. Ely asked the Executive Council for the extension in order that he may have additional time to consider a pending petition for commutation.

Unless executive clemency is granted him, Bull will go to the death chair the same night that Hermany Snyder and John A. Donnellan are executed.

Honor Grad Guilty in Magazine Case

Lawrence Milgroom, 21, Dartmouth honor graduate of 1932, pleaded guilty in Cambridge Court today to two charges of larceny by means of accepting money for magazine subscriptions he never delivered.

He faced Judge Counihan on complaint of Stuart W. Lane of Larch rd., Cambridge, and William Minnick of Cambridge st., Cambridge. Both said they gave Milgroom $10, but never received the magazines. Milgroom promised to make restitution, so his case was continued.

Costume Party to Aid Roxbury Club

A costume party and old-fashioned dance by the members of St. Francis de Sales' Catholic Club of Roxbury will be held in the school hall on St. Francis de Sales' st., Friday evening.

SCHOOLS BALK AT RUM PERMIT

Members of the State Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission today had under advisement an application of Mrs. Cora B. Carlisle for a liquor permit for the old Deerfield Inn which she has operated since 1908.

Mrs. Carlisle explained she had been refused a license by the town authorities after officials of three schools had contested her application. She said she could not compete with similar establishments without a license and that she had spent a large sum of money in maintaining the place.

Women Best Divorce Grist Statistics Reveal

More women than men seek solace and relief from their marital woes in the courts, it was revealed today when Loring P. Jordan, register of the Middlesex Probate courts issued statistics of the "unwedding" department.

Loring showed that out of 712 marriages dissolved in 1933, wives brought 528 of the divorce suits while husbands were responsible for 184.

Cruelty led the list of allegations upon which men and women sought their freedom. On this ground 335 wives got rid of husbands and 68 husbands said goodbye to wives.

Desertion was the second most popular story to tell the judge, according to the figures. In 262 marriages, women obtained 159 decrees and men 103.

Ten husbands won their divorces on frounds of unfaithfulness as against eight women for the same cause. Ten women and two men accused their respective spouses of drunkenness and two decrees were granted on the grounds of impotency.

Of a total of 1012 divorce cases filed in 1933, 832 were finally disposed of. 712 became absolute, 137 were dismissed and three transferred to other counties.

Grieving Girl Sips Death Drink

Discovered by her mother writhing in agony on the floor of the bathroom of their home in 11 Carpenter st., South Boston, last night, Amy Chatuhm,20, was taken to the City Hospital by police. Despondent, she had attempted suicide by drinking a large quantity of an antiseptic. According to police, she has attempted suicide several times before.

Mary Pickford Envies Skilled Golfers

By Mary Pickford

As I bring this series of articles to a close today, I realize there are many unanswered questions that the mailman brought during my stay in Boston.

In recapitulating the underlying thoughts behind the questions, and more or less grouping them under several headings, they are for the most part personal queries about my hobbies, my favorite color, how I spend my leisure time, what I think about present-day styles and if I go to the movies

INTERESTS DIVIDED

In writing this good-bye to most friendly Boston, I include the answers to some of the questions

In the first place, like so many Americans I find myself without a hobby. Not that I wouldn't enjoy one. But like so many stars my interests are diversified. While I have many favored activities that could be classified as hobbies, I am without one special interest that completely holds my leisure attention.

But some day I hope to seriously cultivate a good game of golf. Gene Sarazen told me I had a natural swing and it won't be very long before I put his compliment to a test. That sport appeals to me particularly because it enables me to get out into the country and be myself—until I learn to play a good game of golf so that my friends, whose game is excellent may be spared the ordeal of playing with an amateur.

You know you can learn to play without the unceasing eye of a professional focused on your swing and shots. I wish we could do without caddies and their superfluous indulgence as they stand by impishly and with superiority worry your game for you into a horrible score

I have no one favorite color, my coats are either grey, beige or dark brown. My dresses are blue, brown grey, and purple-blue. My hats and shoes are to match. I find that various colors are much more satisfying to your moods than one-stand-by color.

PREFERS SIMPLICITY

In the evolution of dress I believe styles have never been so flattering to women of all ages as they are today. They are so feminine and so appealing. The lend grace to the figure. They are slenderizing in line and distinctly simple. Personally, I have always tried to make simplicity the keynote of my dress. I have felt that it is sometimes better to be a bit undressed than a bit over-dressed.

But simplicity is the keynote of milady's apparel today and women should be thankful. After all a woman's face and charm should dominate her costume, not vice versa. The ensemble should serve as a frame to a woman's beauty and femininity. It therefore should be an aid, subservient, a sort of background against which her personality may be silhouetted.

I love the fashions of today. They are smartly simple and elegantly smart

MOVIES?—CERTAINLY

Do I go to the movies? Why certainly. I may be like a motorman on his day off going for a trolley ride, but back home in Hollywood I try not to miss any of the picture openings. After all, I am a designer of the theater and the screen. The movies are practically part of me. Naturally I enjoy a motion picture with the same constructively critical eyes as a modiste views the gown of her creation.

The motion picture is admirable entertainment, and I enjoy them for they bring the world to our doorsteps.

Soon I leave Boston, but I want all my friends to know that we owe go the pleasantest memories of a delightful visit to the Athens of America.

LUPESCU AGAIN IN 'BOMB' PERIL

Bucharest, Jan. 25 (INS)—Coincident with rumors of a new attempt on the life of Mme. Magda Lupescu, King Carol's favorite, King Boris and Queen Joanna of Bulgaria arrived today on a state visit.

The rumors, which could not be confirmed, stated anti-semitic "Iron Guard" members hurled a bomb at Mme. Lupescu's villa last night.

King Carol, the Dowager Queen Marie, Prince Nicholas, and former Queen Elizabeth of Greece greeted the Bulgarian monarchs.

Foreign Minister Nicholas Titulescu was absent, pleading illness but failure to appear revived reports of differences with King Carol over the latter's refusal to renounce Mme. Lupescu, despite growing public opposition to her power as head of the so-called "Court Camarilla."

LOUELLA O. PARSONS' DAILYNEWS OF FILM STARS

Paramount to Produce "Is Zat So," with Jimmie Gleason and Robert Armstrong

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Copyright, 1934, Universal Service, Inc

Los Angeles, Jan. 25—Until Jimmie Gleason wrote "Is Zat So?" and it was produced on Broadway with Jimmie playing the fight manager and Robert Armstrong getting a hand as the fighter, he wasn't eating regularly. After "Is Zat So?" went over with a bang, old Dame Fortune changed her expression—and Jimmie became a famous playwright and actor.

Well, to make a long story short, Paramount is talking about for stories, remembered "Is Zat So?" which had only been produced on Broadway, Boston, by Fox. Boo-o Jimmie, under contract to Fox and his play, owned by Fox, were both handed over to Paramount on a deal with Winfield Sheehan. And, of course, Robert Armstrong plays the role he created on the stage.

If Constance Cummings and her bridegroom, Benn Levy, go a-Maying in England, it won't be until the apple blossoms have come out. Jobs await Mrs. Levy and plenty of them. Her first one of this series will be opposite Ralph Bellamy at Universal where she pays the lead in the much-talked of "Glamour" opposite Paul Lukas and Russ Colombo. That picture ought to go into production within the next few weeks since Doris Anderson is preparing the scenario. William Wyler directs.

Soon you will have those beautiful girls paying artists to put them on magazine covers, so many of them have been discovered by movie producers via the magazine cover route or in an advertisement. Paulina True, whose face adorns the cover of a current magazine, reaches here today with a Warner Brothers contract in her pocket. One of the Warner Brothers three, saw Miss True's picture and sent scouts out to find her. They discovered a very pretty brunnette who was posing to pay her way through Art Institute. Promptly the Warner scouts signed her up for First National Pictures and now you will be seeing her.

A Line or Two

Vince Barnett, town tribber, says from now on his social status has changed. He goes into the cast of "The Firebrand" with Constance Bennett and Fredric March and no one need think he is just a lowdown cheap comedian. Stepin Fetchit does such a swell job in "Carolina" that Winfield Sheehan is going to be busy loaning him out once people have seen the pictures. And speaking of "Carolina," it's Janet Gaynor's best since "Seventh Heaven" and one of the best pictures Fox has ever made. Little Gaynor stands her ground with two such troupers as Lionel Barrymore and Henrietta Crosman, and when I say troupers, wait until you see them. Lionel, who is one actor who never disappoints has gone to New York with Irene to try to see if a change of climate will not restore her health.

Snapshots of Hollywood

KATHARINE CORNELL receiving a real ovation from filmland's greatest stars; her "Juliet" so delighted NORMA SHEARER that she never took her eyes off the talented stage star . . . KAY FRANCIS, LILY DASTHAM, LESLIE HOWARD, among those who applauded and applauded the Cornell portrayal of Shakespeare's most popular heroine. SIDNEY FOX obviously self-conscious at the play with her husband, CHARLES BEAHAN. VIVIENNE SEGAL mourning the loss of her pet dog, escorted by DANNY DANKER, soap magnate. The same JAFFES entertaining MOLLY PICON and her husband. LYLE TALBOT devoting himself to a blonde, introduced as SANDRA JAMBEAU. ALICE TERRY growing more and more buxom, losing Hollywood with her husband's close friend, HERB HOWE. DICK POWELL signed up on a swell new radio job. HARRIETT LAKE, now called ANN SOTHERN, dining at the Fillmore with a very good looking youth and the MONTE BELL. The WILLIAM HAWKS (BESSIE LOVE) entertaining RONALD COLMAN with a buffet supper this next Sunday night. The old romance of LOIS WILSON and RICHARD DIX is being revived; meanwhile LOIS' former boy friend, WINSLOW FELIX, has been going places with MARION NIXON. The four recently stepped out together. MAURICE CHEVALIER throwing a dinner party at Sardi's. MRS. KOERNER introduced by ERNST LUBITSCH to some of his friends, is charming. A typical Viennese she knew Ernst before he conquered America. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

High Feminine Charm Average 'Crazy Quilt' Is Met's Revue

Miriam Battista, fascinating actress, attaining stardom in "Enlighten Thy Daughter" (Scolisy and Modern).

Madge Evans, sweetheart in the romance of "Fugitive Lovers," exciting film drama on Orpheum screen.

The Metropolitan tomorrow features on stage Billy Rose's musical hit, "Crazy Quilt," with screen and stage stars. "Crazy Quilt" has also lavish settings and songs. It is a new production especially designed by John Murray Anderson, "Crazy Quilt" brings to the Times screen team of Ames Brothers and Charles King. And with this popular combination will be seen ann her sister, Jane Smith and Dan Healey Powell, dancing star of Zanfield's "Hot Cha," and Cardini card manipulator and mystifier, are also in the show. The musical in its present form runs over one hour

New Manager

E. M. Loew's Dorchester, located at Fields cor., now has a new manager, Saul L. Goldstein. "Goldie," as he is familiarly called, is well known in the show business and promises the patrons of the Dorchester theater a continuance of the policy which is responsible for much of this theater's success. First-run showings of United Artists, Columbia and Universal pictures will be a regular occurrence.

"Morning Varieties"

There will be new features at the second "Morning Varieties" which are to be given in Symphony Hall on Saturday morning, Jan. 27, at 11 o'clock.

JOHNSON, NRA BOSS, ON AIR TONIGHT

By N. F. T.

All of the listeners who tune in on the Yankee Network waves (WNAC) tonight between 9:30 and 10 o'clock, will hear the voice of the big NRA boss, Gen. Hugh Johnson, talking from coast to coast by radio, with "The New Industrial Democracy" for a topic.

• • •

It happens that Gen Johnson is now in New England. He is addressing the Worcester Chamber of Commerce. His scheduled speech goes out over nationwide Columbia chain stations from WORC, the western Massachusetts air outlet.

POETIC PROGRAM

Some special bits of poetry, written long ago by Bobby Burns, the celebrated Scottish bard, are being aired (WEEI) this evening from 9:30 until 10 o'clock. It's the 175th anniversary of the famous poet's birth at Ayr in Scotland. There will be a selected male chorus on hand to render well known Burns verses vocally, accompanied by Organist Archer Gibson.

• • •

Jimmy Ross, star of the weekly "Showboat" hour (WEEI) due as usual on Thursdays at 9 o'clock and at night, will sing "Throw Another Log on The Fire" and "Mary Lou" when his baritoning reaches Eastern loudspeaker patrons. Lanny will sing in Hollywood. His contribution comes across the continent by special wire.

SNAPPY MUSICAL TABLOID Comes to the Boston Tomorrow -:- Stellar Array of Celebrities in GRAND OPERA LIST

'The New Yorkers' Has Talent Aplenty With George Givot Leading the Cast

By GEORGE HOLLAND

Out of Providence, (where this is written), have come hysterical whispers over the theatrical underground in the past few days of an exciting musical show parading under the title "The New Yorkers," and of a nearly perfect amalgam of assorted talents which has laid audiences low. By golly, though, they were not going to fool your Grand Uncle Homer. So I went there, or here (Providence), to see for ourselves. We saw. We saw the fastest, most entertaining sixty minutes you will ever buy for whatever the prices are at the RKO Boston theater, beginning tomorrow.

George Givot

Bobby Connolly and Anatole Friedland are the maestros of this swell entertainment. "The New Yorkers" and if it should be Anatole Friedland and Bobby Connolly instead of the way I have set down the billing, it does not make any difference. Those two young veterans of Broadway at their best have merged their capacities to show what should be done with a "unit," or tabloid musical. This type of fun has become a great vogue. Theaters are yawning and yearning for condensed musical shows.

So in an inspired moment of reveal perhaps at Lahiffe's Tavern, Messrs. Friedland and Connolly decided to turn this sen into something personally commercial

You encountered Mr Connolly recently when he staged, cast and directed "The Rivals" at the Shubert Theater. You have met the modest Mr. Friedland for many years without, perhaps, knowing that he had any connection with some of the shows you enjoyed. You are going to meet him time and again, he or his handiwork, in the future, for I predict that the RKO circuit or the Paramount-Public chain, will be out hitting each other for the future creations of Mr Friedland and Mr. Connolly.

"The New Yorkers" played the Hollywood theater in New York several years ago with a cast of names reading something like: Jimmy Durante, Fred Waring's Band, Hope Williams, Charles King, Frances Williams, Ann Pennington, Ethel Merman and Cole Porter's music. It was a dreary evening in the theater nevertheless

Some of Cole Porter's music has been salvaged. His "Love for Sale" for instance Also "Manhattan." None of that "New Yorkers" cast is present at the Albee theater in Providence today.

George Givot, the Greek "Ambassador," however is. So is Fred (Pansy) Sanborn, who has been in Europe too long

So is Norman Frescott, the greatest straight man for a mind reading act that the generation has produced. No by implication, is Babe Stanton Telling what Miss Stanton does for "The New Yorkers" would be like giving away the solution of a mystery play. Telling that Madlyn Killeen is charming and one of our best singing actresses and that Dawn O'Day is such a tap-dancer (with a personality) as you haven't seen in many seasons, is permissible, if not obligatory.

Here is a perfect tabloid musical revue. Mr. Connolly and his associate, Charles Monoon, have assembled a line of 24 girls which would decorate a follies They are the best dancing act I have seen this year

George Givot, my choice for the whole 11 of 1934 comic American, is excruciatingly funny. I think he is a vogue. Fred Sanborn, back with the xylophone act only a few of oldtimers remember, almost steals the show even from Givot. Together (and they work together with an unbelievable spirit of cooperation that I haven't seen between comedians since Willie Collier and Sam Bernard). They are great, so I am coming back to Boston tonight so I can get a good night's rest in order to be aroused on Friday in time to make the breakfast show at the Boston.

Hollywood Close-Ups

By JAMES E. MITCHELL

Hollywood, Jan 25—Grover Jones goes down in the book as being perhaps the only man in the world who has a love-bird guard

In the offices he occupies with William Slavens McNutt at Paramount Studios, Grover has a couple of love birds. Sometimes they fly up to the overhead sprinklers.

After a couple of experiences when the birds tripped the sprinkler, setting off the studio fire alarm, Grover has had a wire cage constructed, not for the birds but for the sprinklers.

When "23½ Hours Leave," ═══ of Douglas MacLean's most successful pictures, was filmed several years ago, Henry Sharp was the cameraman

They're getting ready now to film "Melody in Spring," and Douglas MacLean is the associate producer

Russian Dancers Give Program on Symphony Hall Stage

By MOSES SMITH

Two dancers came out of Soviet Russia and danced last night at Symphony Hall—Tatiana Vecheslova and Vachtang Chabukiani from the Marinsky Theater of Leningrad.

According to the program their first numbers were from "Russian ballets, a reputed hy classical and character numbers." The spectator expecting to see the proletarian precept in symbolized in choreography was disappointed. For if the dancing as typical of the present Russian ballet, the dance of the Russian Revolution is a time affair, filled with the vivid and inhibitions of the traditional arsenal of dance.

Most of the numbers on the program, indeed most have been taken from the typical "presentation" of a high class movie house here, or from one of the night club shows of their more ambitious disphays of the "adagio" technic acrobatics included There was pretty and inoffensive toe dancing

Even the music was in character, ranging from disagreeable Chopin to the becoming of Drdla's "Souvenir" Both musician was contributed by Russian composers was strictly in the innocuous and soothing idiom of the 19th century. Prior Romantice

Only two or three numbers suggested the vitality which we now expect from dancing at a ring dance dance of the Caucasian mountaineers, or a private dance especially But these too, might have been danced with the authenticity that the two Russians gave them last night

The audience, rather unexpectedly, greeted pirouettes and antique juggleries of the dancers with vociferous enthusiasm Apparent it was more than satisfied that for proletarian art was sophisticated more Dramatic entertainment Scratch a revolutionary and you find, I suppose a sentimentalist

Nicholas Kopekin played the piano accompaniments for the dancers In competent fashion He also played several solos as if he were very much bored with the proceedings

SURVEY SHOWS U. S. BUSINESS OPTIMISTIC

New York, Jan. 25 (AP)—An assay of one-third of American industry comprising the firms who make the machines was announced today by the American Society of Mechanical Engineers in its journal.

Come up to the date division of [illegible] NRA and general field [illegible] summarizes the survey. The [illegible] logical name of the [illegible] ness is the capital goods industries and its product is machinery and mechanical equipment.

"Under conditions of normal business activity," says the report, "these industries account for about 30 billions out of a total of 80 billions of dollars of national business in the United States. They employ normally about eight million workers."

WORCESTER IN SURVEY

With activity of [illegible] down to 30 per cent of normal, the council of the engineering society appointed a special committee to study prospects for revival of industry in this close [illegible] to make a survey representative [illegible] were made in five cities selected for geographical spread and variety of products.

The cities were Worcester, Mass., Philadelphia, Atlanta, St. Louis and Milwaukee. In them 200 business concerns were surveyed. These companies make machinery for textiles, food, chemicals, machinery, paper and printing, iron and steel products, leather and leather products, lumber, stone, glass, nonferrous metals, tobacco, rubber goods and "miscellaneous."

DIVIDE ON NRA

"The findings in general," says the report, "are these:

"1—Production costs have increased, with only a few exceptions.

"2—Prices have not advanced to cover increased production costs, and profits are down in the majority of the concerns reporting.

"3—About two-thirds of the concerns have no plans for modernization of machinery and mechanical equipment.

"4—About 60 per cent report that they would not invest in machinery or mechanical equipment at the present time.

"5—As regards the effect of the NRA and the codes put in practice, the returns are equally divided for and against.

"6—As regards optimism or pessimism toward the immediate future of business, the majority are optimistic.

"A significant feature of these returns is that essentially the same attitudes and points of view are reported from all five of these industrial cities, indicating a unanimity of opinion, although the localities are widely separated geographically and a variety of industries were explored."

Bidding Errors Frequent in Contract

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Whitney Curry of Bradenton, Fla., submitted to me a very interesting question in bidding. There is no doubt that more players go wrong in the bidding than in the play of hands at Contract Bridge. This probably because the duplicate of beautiful hands of bridge, depending as it does up[illegible] exchange of pieces of information, not as easy for one to m[illegible] for as the technique of [illegible]

The hand was.

South, Dealer.

♢ KQJ10642
♣ [illegible]

♠ KQJ6
♡ K864
♣ A753

The actual bidding of the hand went as follows:

South	West	North	East
1♠	2♢	3♣ (1)	Pass
3♢ (2)	Pass	3♡ (3)	Pass
4♣ (4)	Pass	6♠	Pass
6♡ (5)	Pass	7♠ (6)	Pass
Pass	Pass

(1) North has a long and strong suit, but being void in his partner's suit, and holding only 3 honor tricks, he should not force.

(2) South has a hand far above minimum strength with a [illegible] ...ers with his partner's hand, so [illegible] opportunity to show their ace to locate in diamonds.

(3) In view of the fact that South has shown a strong hand by his three diamond bid, it is important for North to disclose a second bidable suit, even of only four cards, before a game contract is reached.

(4) There is no need to hurry. North's Forcing Takeout assures a game contract and this single bid now gives the opportunity for further exchange of information.

(5) This is a rather strong Slam bid. South has shown support for clubs and now reopens the bidding at the range of six-odd to show support for North's second biddable suit, fully realizing that it must be much shorter than the suit first named.

(6) Of course the key to North's bid of seven is the fact that he holds no spades whatever and his partner has assured him that he holds no diamond losers. It does not seem possible, in view of the fact that North holds the heart Ace, that South would bid six hearts if he not held the Ace of clubs. The contract of seven appears reasonably safe.

Today's Question

The Opening bid is two diamonds. Responding hand holds

♠ 543 ♡ 92 ♢ J1054 ♣ AJ62

What is the correct response?

Answer: Three diamonds. The hand has adequate trump support and more than one honor-trick.

Duce Gives Royalties on Book to Charity

Rome, Jan. 25 (INS)—Premier Benito Mussolini, as author of one of the best selling books in Italy, today contributed his royalties to relief work organized by the Fascist party.

The book is his "Life of Arnaldo," story of the Duce's brother, who succeeded him as editor of the Fascist Italia. The book, in its first four editions, brought him in 21,000. The book, except for a deluxe edition, which sells at 24 a copy, is retailed in Italy at 80 cents a copy.

BAGS OF GOLD
Tomato Sauce

3 tbsps. butter
3 tbsps. chopped onion
3 tbsps. flour
1 No. 2 can tomatoes (2 cups)
2-3 tsp. salt
1-3 tsp. sugar
Pepper

Melt butter and add onions. Let onions cook until yellow colored. Blend in flour. Add tomatoes, sugar, salt and pepper and mix well, breaking tomatoes into small pieces. Bring to boil before dropping in the dumplings.

Dumplings

2 cups flour
4 tsps. baking powder
¾ cup milk
1 tsp. salt
2 tbsps. fat
3-4 cup grated cheese

Sift together dry ingredients, add 2 tbsps. of the grated cheese, cut in the fat, add milk slowly and mix well. Knead gently to round upon lightly-floured board. Roll out dough in very thin oblong sheet (about ¼ inch thick.) Cut into 3 inch rounds. Place a tablespoon of grated cheese in the center of each round. Wet edges with cold water. Gather up edges and pull together like a bag. Seal well.

Drop dumplings into tomato sauce, cover tightly and steam 13 minutes without lifting cover. The sauce should be kept simmering so that there will be steam enough to cook the dumplings. Care must be taken, however, to keep the sauce from burning in the center of the saucepan. Serve dumplings and tomato sauce immediately. This makes 10 dumplings and a generous amount of tomato sauce for each dumpling.

INDIVIDUAL STUFFED STEAKS

Round steak, 1½ inches thick
1 cup mushrooms
8 or 9 crackers, rolled
½ cup cream
3 tbsps. butter
Salt and pepper

Have the round steak cut into individual portions. With a sharp knife make a pocket in each piece. Make a dressing of the mushrooms, rolled crackers and cream. Sprinkle the steak with salt and pepper and fill the pockets with dressing. Sew or skewer the edges of the pockets together. Brown on all sides in hot butter, transfer to baking dish, add a little hot water, cover closely and bake in moderate oven (350 deg.) until tender, about 1½ hours.

Spanish Leader Shot in Rioting

Madrid, Jan. 25 (AP)—Antonio Zarraza, director of the Students' Federation, was shot through the face today in a clash between students at the Medical College clinic following suspension of classes by authorities.

Twenty students were arrested after another gun battle—this without casualties—at the Castelian Teachers College.

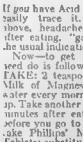
Here's The Way To Tell If You Have Acid Stomach

The Signs of Acid Stomach

Nervousness — Auto-Intoxication — Feeling of Weakness
Neuralgia — Nausea — Sleeplessness
Indigestion — Frequent Headaches — Mouth Acidity
Loss of Appetite — Sour Stomach



What to Do For It

TAKE—2 teaspoonfuls of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia in a glass of water every morning when you get up. Take another teaspoonful thirty minutes after eating. And another before you go to bed.

OR—Take the new Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tablets—one tablet for each teaspoonful as directed above.

If you have Acid Stomach, you can easily trace it. The symptoms above, headaches, stomach pains after eating, "gas," "upsets" are the usual indications.

Now—to get rid of it, all you need do is follow these directions: TAKE: 2 teaspoonfuls of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia in a glass of water every morning when you get up. Take another teaspoonful thirty minutes after eating. And another before you go to bed. Or—you can take Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tablets; substituting one tablet for each teaspoonful of the liquid and get the same result.

Try It—You Will Be Amazed! Try this and, chances are, it will make a great difference in your life. For this small dosage of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia acts to neutralize stomach acids causing distress.

After-meal pains and discomfort go. You feel freedom from dull headaches. That "afternoon fag"—you think is depletion or "nerves" disappears. You feel like another person. People are doing this—doctors advocating it, everywhere.

But when you buy, be sure to get the REAL article—Genuine PHILLIPS' Milk of Magnesia—the kind doctors endorse. Always ask for it by the name PHILLIPS'.

ALSO IN TABLET FORM

RUDY'S ALICE GETS FILM PAY

Los Angeles, Jan. 25 (AP)—Under a stipulation of attorneys in the case, Alice Faye, actress and the alleged "other woman" in the marital affairs of Rudy Vallee and Fay Webb Vallee, will be able to draw $300 a week from a motion picture studio.

The orchestra leader's wife obtained a restraining order enjoining the film studio from paying Miss Faye any money, as she was part of Vallee's troupe which recently made a film. The order permits her salary until the case is decided.

Hearing of Mrs. Vallee's plea for $7450 a month alimony until trial of her suit for separate maintenance has been continued until Jan. 31.

The Two Tennis Helens Brew a Furious Broth

The Braves' Judge Goes Into Kitchen To Prepare a Meal

By AUSTEN LAKE

Miss Helen Jacobs, who in her little tennis day has been champion of everything except Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, is attending to her winter training at Longwood's covered courts, leaping around the battleship linoleum floor in footsy bounces that display enter taining glimpses of girlish shank and peeps of intimate linen. Some times little Sarah Palfrey, who from the overhead gallery looks like a small neighbor's daughter who has just dropped her play room toys and intends to scamper right back to them as soon as she settles this little business, comes over and romps with the big ger girl, whacking the ball with her snowshoe and performing juvenile miracles that prompts the gallery to refined palm-clapping and soft, prayerful "Ah's."

There is a good-natured, puppy frisking to all this and Jake's big, sisterly character does not fit with the feminine feud that is simmering quietly against the time when she will meet Mrs. Moody next summer in an exchange of shots at 30 paces. True, they will merely be tennis shots, some of them flabby lobs and net teasers, but the intent will be just as deadly as though the two ladies were throwing hand grenades and gas capsules. Because I hear that Helen No. 1 just now is baking the crick out of her back with mud plasters and electric irons under a consuming desire to be physically fit, please bear heaven, when she comes from wise to Helen No. 2 at Forest Hills next summer.

This is what the boys call a "natural," which happens when a pair of talented ladies focus on a common ambition, and the "furies that rest in the female breast" ignite with the heat of a mutual yearning. In modern tennis history this has happened only once before and then when Molla Mallory, whose fury of emotion used to kindle bonfires, gave Suzanne Lenglen, the French girl, fits of nervous indigestion and heart quavers by the mere audacity of entering the same tournaments at Wimbledon. Only where Molla and Suzanne, by the intensity of their natural flame, were emotional opposites from babyhood, the two Helens were reared in the same Berkeley neighborhood and Sunday school surroundings and like two peas in the same pod. It is possible, peeled of their mutual championship cravings, they might now be tinkling two part piano harmonies or painting from a single watercolor dish.

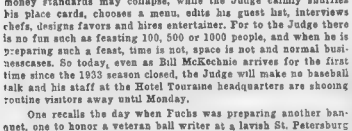
When Judge Fuchs Prepares a Banquet

Just now Judge Emil Fuchs of the Braves is possessed of a great purpose. He is preparing a banquet for Ex-Mayor James Curley, which means that nations may war, men may riot and money standards may collapse, while the Judge calmly shuffles his place cards, chooses a menu, edits his guest list, interviews chefs, designs favors and hires entertainer. For to the Judge there is no fun such as feasting 100, 500 or 1000 people, and when he is preparing such a feast, time is not, space is not and normal business cases. So today, even as Bill McKechnie arrives for the first time since the 1933 season closed, the Judge will make no baseball talk and his staff at the Hotel Touraine headquarters are shooing routine visitors away until Monday.

One recalls the day when Fuchs was preparing another banquet, one to honor a veteran ball writer at a lavish St. Petersburg hotel. During the mornings and late afternoons he assembled his male chorus of newsmen and players in his private suite, drilling them by waving a panetella cigar in time to their squallings. For, though the Judge is fairly tone deaf and can carry a melody only in a droning monotone, his ear is shrewd.



Suddenly the telephone rang and the Judge, shushing his choir, picked up the receiver, saying, "O yes Mr. Guggenheim . . . that brief? . . . I know it is overdue. But I've been tied up in important conferences. . . . Now?. I'm in the middle of a very serious meeting. A vital meeting. . . . Yes, I know it means a lot of money, but . . . Hello. Hello."

"I guess he hung up," said the Judge lifting his panetella and, in perfect humor, requesting the choristers to start that last verse all over again. "And more Tum-tum on the basses, if you please," said he. Years later in reminding him of the incident he confessed that the little rehearsal and the loss of the Guggenheim business cost him a cool $30,000.

Bobby Brown Sends a Word of Cheer

The morning's mail brings a letter in the round, schoolboy hand of Bobby Brown, the Hingham wonder child, whose pitching shoulder grew a pain last year. It started as a little pain, according to Bobby, and gradually developed into a great big pain, which a battery of specialists and a hundred assorted treatments failed to cure. Just now the fortunate youth is cooking himself under the infra-red rays of the Florida sun, whither the Braves have sent him to warm the oils of his pitching joints. "The old hinge feels sound," writes Bobby. "I'm itching to cut loose with a couple of fast ones, but for the time, I'll just toss 'em slow and slower until, when the Braves report next month, I'll have my rifle-ball ready." Optimistic words are these.

CANADA-U. S. ICE SERIES PLANNED

Montreal, Jan. 25 (AP) Strong possibility of a Canadian-United States pool season series of hockey games for the amateur championship of the two nations arose today when Frank C Greenleaf, president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association announced he approved such a plan and had sought the approval of various branches

The Allan cup holders of Canada and the U S champions have never met in a post-season title series as such although every four years for some years back the titleholders of the two nations have clashed in the finals for the Olympic championship. So far Canada has always emerged on top.

No indication has been received here how the U. S. authorities view the proposed move, but it is expected that, with the renewed interest in and development in quality of hockey below the line, the international series would be welcomed

Such a team, for instance, as the Atlantic City Sea Gulls, present U. S. champions, would be expected to given Canadian champions a keen struggle

At present the Allan cup and the Canadian title is held at Moncton, N. B., by the high-flying Hawks who promise to be a threat again judging by their position in the much-strengthened Maritime Big Four Hockey League

Strong possibility exists that the U. S champions might be a university outfit, taking into consideration the fact that Harvard, Yale and Princeton, among others, have much improved teams. But whether they are strong enough to pass Red MacKenzie's Sea Gulls, and a number of other powerful U. S aggregations remains to be seen

SHORE TO PLAY IN BENEFIT?

New York, Jan 25 (AP)- After deftly side-stepping the issue of responsibility, the governors of the National Hockey League today had left one important problem to be decided before the argument over the Ace Bailey-Eddie Shore case finally is settled

That question is- Will Shore play on the All-Star team against the Maple Leafs when the exhibition game on for Bailey's benefit?

The board decided that instead of upholding Toronto's claims the Boston club should pay at least a part of the hospital bill incurred when Bailey was injured in a collision with Shore Dec. 12 and however left him and death for some time, it would stage the game at Toronto for Bailey's benefit.

Thus no precedent was set by which other clubs could make similar claims for injuries, and it was estimated that the player would receive about $20,000. The Boston Club staged a benefit game a few weeks ago, bringing in about $6000

The choice of a date and of the players, not more than two from each club, was left to the league's board of control, and the question immediately arose as to whether Shore would be chosen

The Boston defense player has been chosen on all-star teams for several seasons, but there is a possibility that the storm might start all over again if he should appear in such a contest before a crowd of Toronto fans.

Official announcement was made today by W. F. Adams, president of the Boston Bruins, that Eddie Shore would return to the local lineup in Sunday night's game with the New York Rangers at Madison Square Garden, New York.

Shore, who has been out of the game since his clash with "Ace" Bailey on Dec. 12, has been working out daily on Garden Ice. He is said to be entirely recovered, both physically and mentally, from the near disastrous results of the Maple Leaf encounter.

A. L. UMP SPEAKS AT BROOKLINE

George Moriarty, American League umpire and sports orator of note, addressed some 250 pupils of St. Mary's High School in Brookline this morning

Moriarty spoke of his baseball experiences, from the angle of both player and umpire, and told a number of interesting stories about diamond dubs and heroes. He drew a number of lessons from his anecdotes, and the club very much enjoyed the talk

The A. L. arbitrator also gave a resume of the league baseball rules and starts a tour that will take him to many parts of the country addressing school and club athletic meetings on baseball and sportsmanship.

Moriarty was introduced by Rev George Dowd, director of the Catholic High School sports activities.

IN CELLAR

They are now mired in the cellar of the American Division. From the first of the season to New Year's, the Bruins traveled along at a pace which, though not spectacular would have landed them one of the three much coveted playoff berths

During the first season that the National Hockey League operated in two divisions the Chicago Blackhawks slipped into the playoff with only 41 points, which is the low ebb for post season spring qualifications, in the American Division. With the expection of [illegible] last are assured of a playoff position. They will be able to spar around for the position, which in their opinion, is the most favorable for success during the past seven years. Realizing the possibilities of an upset in the Stanley Cup finals if they ever cut some all clubs will bear down against Boston and ease up against the lesser feared aggregations. And such procedures would not benefit the Boston cause

FANS STILL LOYAL

Although they are far from satisfied with the brand of hockey the Bruins have been playing for the past month, the fans have not deserted the Boston team. They are trying to fathom the trouble for they have been advised and agree that with every trade the Bruins have been strengthened yet the overcome of recent games clearly indicate that the opposite is true

From the viewpoint of the fans Eddie Shore is the only salvation. He is due to return next week against the Rangers, and if he fails to pull the Bruins out of their long slump, will throw up the sponge and go into retirement until the opening of the baseball season.

WIDDY NEALE MAY SUCCEED ROOT AS YALE GRID MENTOR

'REG' MAY SWAP BERTHS WITH ELI OFFICIAL

New Haven Ct Jan 25 (INS)—That William H (Widdy) Neale present head of intercollegiate athletics at Yale, is scheduled to succeed Reginald Root as head coach of Eli football although the Yale board of athletic control has not yet held its formal meeting to make the official appointment was learned in authoritative though unofficial circles here today.

From the same source it was learned that Walter Camp Neale, head coach at the University of West Virginia and former National League baseball player will in all probability step up to the as high ranking position

ROOT MAY SWAP JOBS

A persistent rumor that Root succeed Widdy Neale as head the inter collegiate athletics could not be confirmed but in close touch with the situation described it as a possibility

There is feeling on the campus and in the alumni that Root did a great deal during the past year to help further the athletic program instituted under the honor system This makes an additional argument of considerable strength in support of the rumor that he will retain his job with Neale

Neale a remarkable success as the inter collegiate athletics head that he started in football basketball and baseball while in school graduate in the class of 1921 as well as a post graduate while he was in the Navy are believed to have been factors in making him the probable next successor to Root

FARMER NOW ON TRIP

Although it could not be definitely confirmed it is rumored that Malcolm Farmer is now on trip to interview Walter Neale or other men who are under consideration for the position Farmer is one of the Eli coaching staff and that he will retire Neale as end coach.

KICK MISSING FROM FARGO'S PET PUNCH

By BILL CORUM

New York, Jan 25 (US)—Barney [illegible] lightweight champion, outpointed Billy Petrolle in an overweight match at the Bronx Coliseum last night. Nobody got [illegible]

[illegible]me 12,000 devotees of the cauliflower ear jammed their way into the oddly-shaped hall that had once [illegible] in the sesquicentennial [illegible]nds in Philadelphia and had been transported to New York by piece, like a jig-saw puzzle.

[illegible]n 12,000 packed inside are 10,000 were turned away. If [illegible] had come wearing a suit of the prize ring, they were fortunate ones. There was no [illegible] To be wholly frank [illegible] were few thrills of any kind other Ross nor Petrolle ever [illegible] their fine reputations here [illegible] Chicago lightweight [illegible] be the greatest fighter we [illegible] seen since Benny Leonard [illegible] fight he was only [illegible] next we've seen since Tony [illegible]oner), if that.

[illegible]SING VENGEANCE

For the old fellow from Fargo, [illegible] still has that once dynamite punch of his it was not [illegible]ped in his glove last night. Petrolle had a punch in [illegible] another fighter, and he and [illegible] made just another fight [illegible] but once there was done in [illegible] one was done by Ross, especially the first two rounds. Barney [illegible] like a lion and went out [illegible] a lamb He ripped old Bill [illegible] a rousing right midway of the [illegible] and that chukker was [illegible] to spare, and in the second [illegible] made gestures that looked [illegible]though he might be going for [illegible]nockout

[illegible] the bell clanged to end that [illegible]e minutes, Dad had the "Old [illegible]tleman" tired and wobbly on [illegible]tinely planted dogs. There was [illegible]time in the second when the [illegible]k-haired, doll-eyed Jewish boy

Willie hemmed in a neutral [illegible]ner, where he punched and [illegible]mmelled him until it looked as [illegible]ugh the one time "Fargo Express" might never roll out of [illegible]re on his own steam

But bill came back to outbox and outpunch him from hell to [illegible] in the third and win the round. [illegible] from there on the best that [illegible]uld be said for the bout was that [illegible] was marked by lively flurries. So [illegible]as I was concerned, there was [illegible] at one time after the second [illegible]en it looked as though a kayo [illegible]ght be imminent

[illegible] Jack Denning was [illegible]t off color in the fourth round, [illegible]en he called one low punch [illegible] Petrolle that was as high [illegible] the Chrysler Tower

[illegible]e sum it drew was a trubute [illegible]s wonderful job of promoting [illegible]l the outstanding records and [illegible]se of the two boys in the main [illegible]t. So it was a pity that one [illegible]them should have turned in a [illegible]t that would have added still [illegible]e luster to his name.

SUNDAY PUNCH

Ross might have if he hadn't [illegible]mehow seemed to take up and [illegible]et hog his way along through [illegible]s middle stages of the mixing [illegible]t I am still to be convinced that [illegible]e young man boasts a ready [illegible]ock punch. Until something happens when he takes his Sunday peg [illegible]t somebody, as he took it at [illegible]avening Will more than one [illegible]nowledgeable being just a nice [illegible]oung boxer in my book

Perhaps there were those who [illegible]heard last night's bout a rousing [illegible]ncounter and who were more than [illegible]delighted with the evening. Possibly [illegible]ey are. Personally [illegible]ore high I am telling you only how [illegible]t looked to me.

ADONIS' BUTT BREAKS NOSE OF PANTHER

By JACK CONWAY

The god of chance smiled on Jim Lordon in the ring at the Boston Garden and as a result he today is able to boast of a victory over "Panther" Joe Malcewicz

Londos and Malcewicz might still be in there under the bright lights battling for the edge that would have meant victory if a hemorrhage had not forced the "Panther" to give up the struggle

The dramatic ending occurred after 43m 32s of fierce battling Malcewicz and Londos had far and away one of the greatest exhibitions of wrestling ever witnessed in this city. The tide of battle turned frequently. First Malcewicz then Londos had the advantage

The "Panther" had been knocked out of the ring, but came back fighting. He battered Londos to the ropes, and Jim turned his back on his opponent. He set his feet on the lower rope, his mighty thumbs on the upper ropes. He swayed back and forth as the "Panther" tried to pull him down and smash his bronzed shoulders to the canvas.

SMASHES JOE'S NOSE

Malcewicz was unable to budge Londos an inch. Suddenly Londos released his own grip on the ropes He shot back with tremendous force His head crashed against the "Panther's" nose and face The blood spurted from Malcewicz nose in a fresh flow and spread well The "Panther's" head hit the canvas of the ring with a terrific thud As Londos tried to pin him Malcewicz rolled over on his side The flow of blood from the "Panther's" nose increased in volume In a few seconds his body was well as the canvas of the ring was a deep red

Dr Edward Sullivan, one of Malcewicz' seconds, was quick to recognize the seriousness of the situation and rushed into the ring He called to Referee Sam Smith to stop the bout and award a fall to Londos, which he did

It was necessary to carry the "Panther" to his dressing room He was found to be suffering from injuries to his head nose and body. When the hemorrhage from the nose continued, Dr Sullivan ordered Referee Sam Smith that the "Panther" would be unable to continue Londos was back in the ring at the time and was declared the winner

It was an hour before Malcewicz had recovered sufficiently to leave the Garden He was ordered to rest by Dr Sullivan until he had recovered from the shocks of the crash

There was little action in the first five minutes of the bout Both men were extremely cautious They maneuvered at long range in an effort to secure an opening

The action picked up as Londos lunged to close quarters and clamped on an arm lock The "Panther" pulled himself clear and smashed Londos on the face with his left forearm He repeated and Londos protested to Referee Sam Smith who told him to go in and wrestle

It was nine minutes before the men went to the mat for the first time The "Panther" clamped on a leg lock, and spread Jim's legs apart. Londos pulled himself under the ropes to save himself from further punishment

Londos was a target for leg locks, and Malcewicz made the most of this weakness in his opponent's defense.

JOE IS FLOORED

Londos electrified the crowd when he nailed the Panther with an inside crotch hold, lifted him in the air and slammed him to the mat. Malcewicz turned on his side and Londos scored with another inside crotch hold He rolled the "Panther" around six times, and dropped him to the canvas with a frightful thud. Malcewicz turned on his side before Londos could pin him, and kicked himself clear Londos used a step over toe hold from the rear very effectively. The "Panther" crawled under the ropes to get out of the danger zone

At the 45m. mark Londos opened a furious attack He clamped on two inside crotch holds in succession and crashed the "Panther" to the mat. Joe stopped the Londos siege by using a headlock Londos later tossed Malcewicz through the ropes to the floor of the Garden

Then followed the dramatic ending described above

Mr. BOSTON

By JACK CONWAY

I was on my way to the press row at the Londos-Malcewicz bout at the Boston Garden.

My friend Mr Boston, I am so glad to see you "

A nice arm encircled my body, and I felt much like I would if seized by a bear

A white carnation brushed against my face and petals of mignonette bounced off my ears.

"The great Tou Daro," I said as I recognized the man with the hug of a bear.

"All the way to Boston from Los Angeles," he said good naturedly. "And in the 15 years since I last met you I have never failed to send you a Christmas card, have I? Or to send you my greetings with Boston people I have met on the Coast.

Mr. Boston

"Remember the wrestling bouts I promoted in Boston" They said I was crazy when I went to Nat Butler's track at Revere with the Steelton mule team. The show drew $30,000 which was the record for those days. I twice sold out Mechanics Building with Lewis and Gardini. I think I helped pave the way for some of the great successes Paul Bowser later scored in Boston"

I asked Daro how he was progressing on his quest to become a major, non-wrestling boxing boss for Los Angeles

"I am a close friend of Aneil Hoffman's," replied Daro. "He manages Max Baer. I must have Baer as one of the principals for my proposed bout which will be staged in connection with a charity fund of the Hearst newspapers in Los Angeles.

Seeks Jack Sharkey

"I just talked with Johnny Buckley, and he told me Jack Sharkey is prepared to go to the Coast to battle Baer. A Buck-Sharkey bout would make an ideal attraction I have wired Baer an offer to meet Sharkey. I have also talked with Hoffman in regard to a Baer-Schmeling bout. If possible, I would like to stage two heavyweight bouts in Los Angeles

"Hoffman will not make a decision in regard to Baer's plans until after February 1 on account of a law suit now pending on the Coast. It looks as if Hoffman and Baer will have to make a settlement with George Lorimer, Max's original manager, before any further matches are signed.

"I am not worrying about Jack Dempsey winning the title away from me. Dempsey has color and is a first class front man, but is lacking in experience as a promoter.

"Dempsey has been refereeing boxing and wrestling bouts in the West, but is not drawing as well as he formerly did. The fans feel Dempsey gets all the money, and that inferior shows are being offered They have seen Dempsey in other years, and as a result he has lost some of his pull at the box office.

"Jack is a splendid character, and I would like to see him succeed in whatever he attempts to do, but if he intends to engage with me in the boxing game he has a fight on his hands

"During the past three years I have drawn $3,600,000 at shows which I have promoted in Los Angeles. That is big money in any language"

Always a Great Showman

Daro has always been a marvelous showman In his youth, he was a wrestler. He then went to the stage He had an act where he permitted an automobile to roll over his chest while the theater audience shuddered

"The only danger I was in," said Lou, "was when the driver of the car choked up and put the brakes on too quickly. On such occasions I was dragged, and often badly cut up

"Mrs. William Randolph Hearst saw my show one night at the Hippodrome in New York. That night something went wrong, and I was dragged and bled quite freely from my face. Mrs. Hearst thought it was a brutal act, and the performance was denounced in the Hearst newspapers in New York. I received so much publicity that I had a run of 11 weeks at $1000 a week. That was big money in those days

"The Hearst newspapers on the Coast have done much to help increase interest in athletics. I have had the privilege of conducting several charity boxing and wrestling shows in conjunction with the Hearst newspapers in Los Angeles. Mark Kelly of the Los Angeles Examiner asked me to say hello to you for him. Mark's hair is as red as ever, while he gets much fun into his excellent column.

"I had dinner with Ed Frayne of the New York American in New York last night. He's a Coast boy, and did much to make the Petrolle-Ross bout in New York a sellout."

Vic Christie then entered the ring to wrestle Ernie Dusek

PURPLE FLIER SEEKS THIRD LEG ON CUP

Bernie McCafferty and Arnold Adams have been thrilling track fans for years with their great duels over the 600-yard route Saturday night, they once more face the starter's gun, this time in the Prout Memorial 600 which will undoubtedly result in one of the outstanding features of the Knights of Columbus games at Boston Garden

McCafferty, a former Holy Cross star at three times winner of the Prout Trophy and expects to have his name inscribed for the fourth time

As these rare harriers battle the pair is a rubber meeting for Prout games competition

PURPLE STAR MINS

The former Crusader ran away with the honors last season while Adams led McCafferty the year before

But there are three other speed merchants in the Prout 600 which means a field open field wherein any one of the entries is good enough to win

Then there is Milton Sandler of the German American A C, the New Yorker who built up a fine reputation in middle distance running while studying at Leipsic Germany

Sandler is determined to win the Garden nativity if for no other reason than to show the Melrose A. A that it made a major bone in not keeping him to participate in the Milrose 600 in February

But the real darkhorse of all is Gus McGuigan, former Catholic University trackman who is [illegible] racing in Boston.

LEAPS TO RECORD

He proved a sensation at the Stadium when he amazed Olympic tryout spectators with his amazing performance. Word has leaked out that McGuigan is travelling in near record time and that he may have a surprise package of the entire meeting

George Spitz of New York University has his heart set on establishing a new world record for the high jump right here in Boston where he set the present mark of six feet 8¾ inches

His recent six feet 7½ inches jump proves that he has returned to form again after a year's letdown due to a strained thigh.

He has even forced oldtimers to admit that he is the best high jumper the world has ever known. This is real tribute as Mike Sweeney who cleared 6 feet 5¾ inches more than a quarter century ago has long been the idol of old-time track followers

Spitz has twice cleared the bar at better than 6 feet 8 inches and 11 times has done better than 6 feet 7 inches.

Best of all has been his flawless performance, his style and the ease with which he leaps to the amazing heights.

Students of track feel certain that Spitz will do 6 feet 10 inches before his jumping days are over, a feat which sounds impossible but nevertheless is not out of reason. The record will be turned in his record jump at the B. A. A. game, there was close to two inches of daylight between him and the bar.

Passing the Puck

By BILL GRIMES

After the special N. H. L. meeting, Pres. Frank Calder made his usual laconic and evasive announcement to the press. Weeks ago, it was a well established fact that Conne Smythe was arranging for a benefit game between his Maple Leafs and an all star team for "Ace" Bailey in Toronto.

Other than that the Bruins were held in no way liable for the "Ace" Bailey's bills, there was nothing to Calder's release that would warrant the governors to trek from their various locales. At a later date, the whole of the special meeting will leak out, but in the meantime steps will be taken to place the party whom the governors plan to remove from office.

Eddie Shore and Joe Bretto, the new defense giant who is trying out for the Bruins, were unable to practice at the Arena yesterday as they shipped out to Jamaica pond for a long workout. Bretto is breaking in new skates and both and for that reason he is not very impressing but he is a big strong youth and with some minor league experience may develop in the N. H. L. grade

Coach Joe Gilmore had nothing but the highest praise for the Cubs upon his return from Quebec, where the junior Bruin varsity had first place by dropping both games to the Beavers. Under the condition that exist in Quebec, even the Maple Leafs would have a tough time beating the Beavers.

Bill Carson, the Eagle center, who a few years ago, was raied as the greatest centre in the N. H. L., came up from New Haven to pay a visit to his brother Frank, who is with the Detroit Red Wings As Bill now realizes the game more seriously than when he was with the Bruins, Manager Frank Carroll gave him permission to remain over and join the Eagles today.

Teddy Graham, who is now playing defense for Detroit, is a hockey correspondent for a Chicago paper. Bill is a fan around and while with Maroons he asked Hooley Smith to tell him about the most humorous incident he ever encountered in hockey. Without the slightest hesitancy, Hooley said "is Maurice trading Lionel Conacher for you."

Manager Jack Adams is shouldering the entire blame for John Ross Roach's stump. "I sent him back before he had had an opportunity to regain his nerve after two bad facial lacerations, which required a total of 18 stitches." It's refreshing to meet the Jack Adams type of manager, who has the courage to admit his mistakes.

Russ Blinco, who has been playing so sensationally for Maroons, is the property of the Detroit Red Wings. He has been on a verbal loan agreement but yesterday Jimmy Strachan tendered James Norris, Sr. a written notice to the effect that Blinco belongs to Detroit.

Manager George Boucher refused to sign Jeff Kaltfleisch for his Ottawa Senators until he had been assured by his latest recruit and Scotty Bowman that they had patched up the ill feeling which has existed for two years Kaltfleisch and Bowman did not speak for a couple of seasons while playing on the defense for the Cataracts of Niagara Falls.

They are telling a good one on Earl Roche, who, by the way, is now wearing a trick moustache with the Detroit Olympics. During an Ottawa-Chicago game in the Windy City, Roche stopped in front of the announcer and as soon as he skated away, out of the amplifiers came "Ne. 16, for Ottawa, is Earl Roche, the top scorer of the N. H. L." And Earl skated around acknowledging the plaudit.

Providence Skater Chosen Queen

Boston Sp. Ice Arena.
BOSTON SPARES — Harnott, Buckley, Davie, Cunningham, Halliday, Weir, Smillie.
NEW HAVEN SPARES — J. McCully, Kinsella, Chouinard, Dunning, Wilson, Carleton.

After dropping two games to the Eagles in Quebec and losing possession of first place in the Canadian American League the Bruins Cubs are in a belligerent mood for the contest with the New Haven Eagles tonight at the Boston Garden.

The Cubs will enter tonight's game tied with the Rhode Island Reds for second place.

Although his charges went through two strenuous games in Quebec Coach Joe Gilmore is confident that they retained enough of a punch to stop the Eagles, step back into the top position and then fore preserve their seasons record of not suffering a defeat on their home ice.

Myles Lane will be back in the lineup tonight. He was obliged to return from Quebec, before the second game to take a mid-year examinations at Boston College Law School and his return will bolster the team both offensively and defensively, for he has an unusually fine influence over his players.

New Haven comes here with a team that has proved exceptionally good hockey at times this season and they bring rugged play against the Cubs has proved their games, and Cubs have not yet forgotten that 10-0 shutout the Eagles gave them at New Haven on New Year's Eve. Bill Carson, former Bruins and Toronto National League player, continues as the New Haven first line pivot, with Perkins and Muracle playing his wings. Bob McCully and Cliff McBride will play the starting defense, and Alfie Moore will be in goal.

THRILLS IN SPORTS

The Most Urgent Call In Sporting World Is for New Faces

Such Startling Pans as Holuban's, Kalmikoff's Drew Well at Gate

By Jack Kofoed

Through the jungles of Hollywood and Broadway . . . and the sporting world, as well . . . the continual cry is for New Faces! New Faces! Garbo may be an idol . . . the girls may hang breathlessly on the voice and sight of Rudy Vallee . . . Babe Ruth may still be a hero in spite of his creaking legs . . . but new people are needed to replace them. There is always a bull market for talent with box-office appeal.

That's why Hepburn and Lyman and Hubbell are going places. Dissatisfied married people are not the only ones who shout, "Off with the old and on with the new." Down in our hearts we are all like that . . . particularly with our sporting and theatrical heroes and heroines.

Jack Curley, who is first of all a showman realizes this. His wrestling troupe is comparatively small. No matter how he shuffles the deck . . . how he puts one man against another . . . there are the same funny pans to be seen hauling themselves through the ropes. So Curley has his scouts prowling the European hinterlands looking for queer specimens of the wrestling art.

In the past he has added much to the merriment of the American people. Remember Holuban, the Hungarian whose neck was so thick and his skull so pointed that he could put an unbuttoned collar on over his head? You haven't forgotten Kalmikoff, the red-bearded Siberian, have you? And still among us is Man Mountain Dean, who weighs 310 pounds and looks like all the fat women of Barnum and Bailey's sideshows rolled into one.

But Holuban and Kalmikoff have gone and Dean is no longer a novelty. There must be New Faces to replace them. So, like a magician reaching into a top hat and pulling out rabbits, Mr. Curley is coming forth with two brand new importations.

First of all is Hans Schwartz, who comes from Bavaria and stands seven feet six inches in his bare tootsies. He would make any of our big fellows look like one of Singer's Midgets . . . and what a sight it would be to watch someone like Jim Londos try to get a headlock on him, without using a stepladder or freight elevator!

Years ago when Jack Curley was touring Europe with the Russian Lion, Hackenschmidt, and Dr. Roller he found that Hans Schwartz, senior, was the idol of Bavaria. Curley tried to talk Papa into going to America with him, but Papa said no . . . no . . . no! He liked Bavarian beer and wiener schnitzel and wasn't sure he could get those delicacies in the United States. Now more than twenty years later, his offspring has forsaken the ancestral beer pot . . . and will wrestle for the old maestro.

I don't know anything about Schwartz's ability and I guess Jack took some of the reports with a bucketful of salt. But a guy as big as Hans will get his picture in the papers and draw customers through the turnstiles and that, after all, is everything a promoter can ask.

In the same shipment, all dolled up in lavender and old lace, came a Turk named Mahmet Yousuf Pehliven. That last word means simply "the wrestler" . . . and we'll probably soon find out whether Mahmet is guilty of false pretenses by adding it to his family handle.

He Learned From Papa

This Turkish giant has the advantage . . . if you can call it that . . . of having a wrestling background. His father, now living quietly on a farm near Istanbul, was Wousouf Hussein . . . and his godfather Lousouf Mahmout, the second of "the Terrible Turks." They taught him all they knew. Just how much that was or how good a pupil Mahmet happened to be will be proved later.

At any rate, Jack Curley has several New Faces and that will cause his round, good-natured face to light up with wistful joy. All his years in the game has not robbed Curley of his vital interest in it . . . and he looks forward to his giants' first matches as a debutante does to her coming out party.

So far I have not been privileged to view Hans Schwartz and Mahmet Yousuf Pehliven . . . but I'd bet all the kilowatts used on Broadway signs for seven days that they are not as funny looking as Ferenz Holuban and Sergei Kalmikoff.

In my declining days, when I sit at the fireside with my grandchildren on my knee, I'll have them in stitches as I describe those two. It was one of my great regrets that I should not have been fortunate enough to see them wrestle each other. But perhaps it is just as well. I doubt that I should have been able to survive. After all, there are limits to what the human mind and heart can stand.

But Curley didn't count on Holuban and Kalmikoff. He gave us Leo Pinetzki, the Polish Gorilla, whose arms are so long that when he stands erect his hands hang below his knees . . . and that German contortionist who could throw his shoulders out of joint and pivot on them, thus wiggling out of almost any hold. Ah, yes, Mr. Curley has spared neither time nor expense in collecting the funniest human beings this world holds for our delectation.

We'll get the sideshow attractions later. Hans Schwartz and Mahmet Yousuf Pehliven must get rid of their sea legs, then they can begin entertaining us.

10-1 SAYS SOX WON'T WIN PENNANT

By JOE CASHMAN

[illegible] Bishop Ruffing [illegible] and the other Red Sox stars who cost Tom Yawkey a cool half million smackeroos are rated at one and one by the bookies who lay it on the line.

The odds calculating fellows [illegible] figure both Red Sox and Braves to finish no better than fifth next season which would be a [illegible] for the Hub. It was [illegible] and one place fall for the Tribe.

The price is 10 to 1 against either the local entries winning the pennant. The Giants, Cubs, Pirates and Cardinals, in the order named, are favored over the Braves, while the Senators, Yankees, White Sox and Tigers are picked to finish, as mentioned, above the Sox.

The odds against the other clubs are: Senators, 12-1; Yankees, 8-2; White Sox, 8-1; Tigers, 8-1; Indians, 10-1; Athletics, 10-1; Browns, 100-1; Giants, 2-1; Cubs, 3-1; Pirates, 3-1; Cardinals, 6-1; Dodgers, 15-1; Phillies, 40-1; Reds, 100-1.

These quotations can't be lightly dismissed, these boys who set the prices never let sentiment sway their judgment. They can't afford to. A wrong guess might mean the headline you know.

"REMEMBER GIANTS"

Still there's no reason why the oddsmakers should put four cuts in favoring Assumption as it is for the wagering gents to be robbed, they are far from being infallible. Remember last season? The world's champion Giants were hot-cakes down in seventh place with the price of 20 to 1 against them sending on top of the heap. And the Senators were picked no higher than third.

Neither the Red Sox nor Braves are making any pennant boasts, but Manager Bucky Harris already has claimed a first-division berth for his boys, and it's unlikely that Williamsburg Will McKechnie, who arrives in town today, will be any less modest in his predictions for the Warriors.

And if scout envoys were foolish enough to bet on baseball [illegible] he would stung along with the pair.

The last time McKechnie was here, shortly before the winter meetings, he had high hopes of landing another slugger and he succeeded as yet however, and it doesn't appear as though he would before the start of the season.

Yet he still has intact a club that finished fourth last season and there's no particular reason why he shouldn't expect it to do as well in the coming campaign.

THE YAWKEY CREAMS

Meanwhile, over at Fenway Park President Tom Yawkey will continue to talk Red Sox matters over with Generl Manager Eddie Collins.

The millionaire boy owner of the Sox put in his appearance today. He wanted to discuss only the reconstruction of the orchard which is the object of his love. But the scribes wanted baseball impressions and they got them.

"I'll be pulling for the pennant," said the Fenway "prexy", "but I'll be satisfied if we finish in the first division.

"We've got a smart manager and several new stars, but most of them are absolute strangers as far as working together is concerned. And we have two pitchers in Johnson and Pigras who ordinarily, are winners, but because of injuries in their arms last Summer, they are now of unknown quality.

"If everybody enjoys one of his best seasons and the newcomers waste no time in clicking as a unit, we might grab off the flag. That, however, is a very large 'if'.

"I'll feel the boys have done remarkably well, if they finish anywhere in the money."

Eddie then went on to tell his boss about the fire which destroyed the centerfield stands at the Polo Grounds.

"I knew you were hunting in the Carolinas," said the G. M. "so I phoned Mr. DeBoe, your attorney, for advice.

"After receiving several suggestions, I asked, 'Anything else you can think of?'

"'Will he drawled, 'you might also put out the fire.'"

The interupted everything.

Hull Compiles List of Those Entitled to Offer Stock

By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor, Boston American

Director John C. Hull of the securities division of the Massachusetts department of public utilities in a 40-page bulletin sends us a list of those who have qualified as dealers and salesmen in stocks and bonds for 1934 in the Bay State. We learn that in 1933 651 brokers and 3625 salesmen were registered. As of latest compilations this year 339 brokers and 2858 salesmen were registered for this year.

Joseph B. Eastman, Boston's representative on the Interstate Commerce Commission and so-called "Czar" of American railroads, covered more than three full newspaper pages in his initial report on the railroad situation. The first New Englander to comment on it is Daniel Willard, dean of railroad presidents, who began his career as a section hand up in Vermont. Mr. Willard, recognized as an outstanding authority in railroad matters, says that on the whole he is well satisfied with the report.

Jos. B. Eastman

The feature Mr. Willard seems to like the . . . Mr. Willard does not advocate immediate government ownership. Perhaps there is in mind the experience of government in the war period in Canada. Two railroads clash when Mr. Eastman says only $218,000,000 of the $750,000,000 estimated could be saved through the plan of Frederick H. Prince, Boston financier.

Today, reflecting publication of favorable earnings statement by Berkshire Fine Spinning Associates and Pepperell's increase of 58 per cent in the second mills of 1933, demand was renewed. Berkshire Fine Spinning preferred was up $4 at 40 bid. Pepperell gold at 99½ on the Curb, up $3 and a new 1933 34 high. Parr Alpaca also showed strength at 27 bid, up $7. Other shares were up moderately.

Surprise Is Seen in Sustained Rise Made by Market

By WALL STREET SPECTATOR

The market is surprising even its best friends by the way it keeps on the up and up. Things are rapidly coming to the point where a reaction of some consequence would be welcomed to clear the air a bit, but so far there are few indications that one is in the making.

Apparently the demand for stocks is tremendous, and appears on every dip. Naturally traders are making hay while the sun shines but are ready to jump aside on the least danger signal.

MARKET TEST IN MAKING

With the industrial averages only two points under the July high a real test of the market is in the making.

It may well be that the market will go through with a bang. Then everyone will get hot and bothered, and the reaction will come when least expected . . . There has been concentrated buying in Lackawan now by one crowd that usually knows what it's doing . . . On the average, buying in the second-grade rail bonds is better than in their respective stocks.

With the gasoline price situation clearing, buying in the oils is becoming more confident.

Strength in the electrical equipments is attracting more interest to Allis Chalmers . . . Buying for European and investment trust account continues to bulk large in gossip . . . Pennsylvania Railroad's 50 per cent dividend payment could easily become quarterly, if business keeps improving.

Allied Chemical's high selling price doesn't seem to deter its market followers . . . Reports are that the Chrysler crowd is gunning for the shorts in the stock.

Many are abandoning their entire positions, though corn is being groomed for an advance . . . Watchful observers point out that the yellow grain hasn't done very much of late.

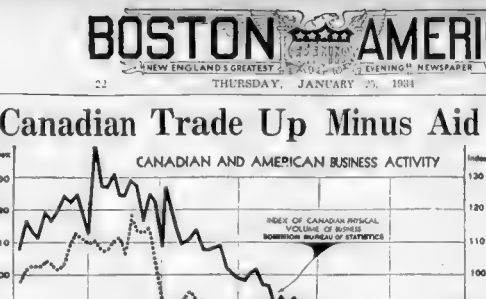
Canadian Trade Up Minus Aid



By JOSEPH STAGG LAWRENCE, Review of Reviews

The accompanying chart is one which, on the whole, cannot fail to be depressing to the student of American economic history—particularly the record of the last five years. In our case the federal government has vigorously and courageously embarked upon a series of economic experiments which are comprehended in the term "New Deal." While the Canadian government has made itself felt in many fields of enterprise, its participation has in no sense been so general as that of the American government. Its attitude is far more that of "hands-off" than may be said of Uncle Sam.

If a pencil is taken and a smooth trend drawn through these two lines it will be noted that the Canadian measure of business volume does not show the same extreme decline which the United States line displays. It is true that in terms of statistically calculated normal the Canadian line was much higher during the boom years than the American line. However, the fact remains that Canadian business on the whole did not plumb the same subnormal depths touched by the United States.

Another disconcerting factor is that Canadian business started its upward movement a full month ahead of the United States, and made rapid progress over a longer period of time than did the United States. All this was accomplished without the inauguration of a new President and without any of the many changes which we include in the term "New Deal." It may be noted that the Canadian rise continued during August and September, whereas the United States took a sharp drop in those months.

On behalf of this country and the "New Deal" it may be said that the problems created by prosperity excesses were perhaps more serious than those in Canada. Canada did not indulge in any heavy foreign lending and did not, therefore, expand its export industries in response to the artificial foreign buying power.

In the second place, Canada has a much sounder banking system with fewer mistakes in the boom period and had less to atone for during the last four years. Finally stock speculation, although as prevalent in Canada as in the United States, did not have the same broad business participation as we saw in this country.

Both the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific lean so heavily on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy for support that fluctuations in the Burlington's traffic are almost as vital to them as swings in their own. It is with considerable satisfaction, therefore, that the Northerns regard the current trend of Burlington loadings. Traffic in the week ended January 20 was 18.8 per cent ahead of the corresponding period of 1933, an even better percentage gain than in the previous week.

Retail Sales Feel Monetary Relief

Confidential advices to a leading banking firm indicate that the definition of monetary policy by President Roosevelt in his dollar devaluation message to Congress to give a dollar bought a substantial revival of public retail buying. Sales of large merchandising organizations have expanded sharply in the past week possibly reflecting to a large extent national relief over the removal of currency uncertainty, although mid-Winter sales have also contributed to the increased volume

Cotton Lower in New York Market

New York, Jan. 25—Cotton futures suffered another setback today, slumping almost 50 cents a bale in comparatively dull trading.

Futures late were off 6 to 8 points, wit hMarch off 6 at 11.05, May off 6 at 11.19; July off 8 at 11.34, and October off 6 at 11.47.

Grains Lowered in Chicago Dealings

Chicago, Jan. 25—Downturns of grain prices took place today, influenced by the fact that temperatures southwest were not as low as had been expected. Buying lacked volume. Opening unchanged to ¾ lower, wheat afterward sagged all around. Corn started unchanged to ⅛ down, and subsequently underwent a general decline.

The Paramount and Fenway theaters are the spots today for Tel-U-Gram fans who would identify advertisers appearing there on the screen and win free tickets to the show.

All you have to do is to identify the entertainers in the accompanying cartoon, print in their names in the squars provided and then mail your solution to the Tel-U-Gram Editor of the Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston.

The following were mailed tickets for the correct solutions to Tuesday's Tel-U-Gram:

EXPLANATION OF 'NEW DEAL' IS PRESENTED

Recovery's Aspects Are Discussed in Haney's Study

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, New York University

New York, Jan. 25 What is The New Deal?"

Well it is two different things. It is, first, a way of dealing with an economic depression, and, second, a scheme of social reform.

The first is the emergency aspect. It includes "relief" methods and stimulation" policies. The CCC and the CWA are primarily for relief. The PWA and inflation are largely stimulants.

The second aspect is that of longrun "reforms," and involves a revolution in economic and political institutions. It is illustrated by the NRA codes of "fair competition," the TVA (Tennessee Valley Administration), and "managed currency."

The central idea is permanent government control, probably some change in political institutions. It is "collectivism" and "social planning."

But we will not understand the reform aspect unless we see that it also has two sides. One of these sides of the "reform" program is evolutionary. It seeks to build on the past and is constructive. It is positive. This is reform proper.

The other side of "reform" is revolutionary. It seeks to destroy part of the past, and is thus destructive. It is negative. This is not reform proper.

I think that while we all desire evolutionary and constructive reform, we should be considering carefully what revolution may destroy in the nature of individual initiative and saving money. The most ardent New Dealer should agree to this

We will make many mistakes if we fail to recognize that the "New Deal" is very largely a reaction against the Old Deal much of which it seeks to destroy in order that it may set up new institutions

And in this connection we also should remember that the new deal reaction gained its political power from the long period of bad war deflation and business depression. There are many evils in our economic system, and government have long sought their correction But the "new deal" would never have come as a revolution had it not been for the inflation, the speculation and the debt burden of the 1920's.

The serious long-run problem of the "new deal" is to destroy the evil part of the "old deal" and at the same time to save the good part.

BULL TACTICS ARE STUDIED

Recent bull tactics are reminiscent of last spring's rise in prices Rotation by groups sums it up. First it was the rails and then specialties. Then, when the list was tiring, the oils were trotted out for a brisk canter, even though it was for only the space of a few hours The industrials suddenly came to life when the financial district heard widespread talk of reaction.

* * *

For the moment let's get back to the argument against an equalization fund. Briefly, it is that buying or foreign currencies it will actually bloat bank reserves. This end is obtained by the Federal Reserve system by acquiring government bonds in the open market. But it is always possible to check a rush to buy credit inflation by re-selling the bonds.

* * *

In the case of a government equalization fund it is argued that once the reserves of banks are forced higher there will be no way of controlling credit expansion. The reason is that it will have nothing to sell to soak up the surplus funds This, of course, assumes the Treasury refused to sell gold or foreign currency.

This And That: We are inclined to think that the President is sufficiently strong to order an about face if he saw uncontrolled credit inflation . . . Which he could obtain, in part at least, by exerting pressure on the Federal Reserve to sell some of the bond holdings . . . The balance of control could come from the Treasury.

FINDS NATION IS ON A FIRM FOOTING NOW

Is Off the Quicksand Long Traveled, Says Forbes

By B. C. FORBES

New York, Jan. 25—After four years of walking on quicksand, America is finding firmer footing. Whereas almost every class was merely was more or less fearful of what might befall—men of affairs, debt-owing farmers, wage-earners, mortgaged home owners, bankers' executives—the majority are now looking rather than downward, rather than downward, are hopeful rather than fearful.

Already there has been genuine improvement in almost every important economic direction: In agriculture, in trade, in employment, in stocks, in bonds, in raw materials, in minimum wages, in farm prices, in industry, in profits.

B. C. Forbes

The atmospheres in America's financial metropolis is no longer heavily charged with nervousness. Day after day brings displays of a degree of stability long lacking. There have been few sharp, disturbing breaks lately in security or commodity prices. Occasionally there have been quick rebounds; but the common thing has been for the markets to move unspectacularly, albeit with a strong undercurrent.

* * *

Judging from questions put to the writer, some apprehension has arisen among salesmen in certain lines that the forbidding of price-cutting by NRA code will limit handicap selling. In salesmanship, other things besides prices count. The best salesmanship, as I see it, can be expressed in one brief sentence:

Make people want to do business with you

First, a salesman must know his business, must know his goods, must know quality, from A to Z.

Second, he must master the problems of his prospects, so that he can see things and talk things from their angle.

Third, he must be sincerely anxious to serve both his own concern and his customers

Canadian Pacific Receipts Are Higher

Good traffic receipts of Canadian Pacific Railway for the week ended Jan. 21 totaled $1,975,000, against $1,922,000 in like period last year, an increase of $53,000.

NEW YORK CLOSE NET CHANGES

Approximate Sales Today 3,200,000 shares
Yesterday's sales 3,358,180
Week ago 2,125,950

Year ago 750,843
1934 to date 38,467,072
1933 to date 15,504,664
1932 to date 22,518,896

New York, Jan. 25 — Leading shares on the New York Stock Exchange moved generally lower on a dull turnover this afternoon. In the final hour motor shares were fairly steady but other divisions yielded fractions to around a point.

Issues showing late declines of fractions to around a point included American Commercial Alcohol, Case, U. S. Steel, American Telephone, Consolidated Gas and American Can.

Bonds moved narrowly in on a "when issued" basis, the new Treasury issues and certificates were quoted at premiums over par. Grains closed weak.

General Motors, Chrysler and Hudson were taken in large volume. The activity here was due to reports of booming business in the Detroit factories which were swamped with orders. Hudson got up to a new 1933-1934 high.

Rails and utilities, though, were under consistent pressure and eased from fractions to more than a point. New York Central, Atchison, Union Pacific, Lackawanna, and several of the lower priced carrier shares dropped moderately.

Chemicals and specialties were quiet as were the liquor shares. Gold mining shares were neglected and displayed a somewhat heavy tone.

Price changes were mixed in the first hour with volume light. Most changes were limited to fractions. Devoe & Reynolds was strong, up 3 points. Allied Chemical, Auto-Lite, Continental Insurance, Marshall Field, Erie and U. S. Smelting showed gains of a point or more.

New York Central, Northern Pacific, Allied Chemical and U. S. Steel recorded slight recessions. Spiegel May Stern receded a point.

Liens displayed a steady tone in response to the favorable investment sentiment created by the heavy oversubscription to the Treasury's billion dollar offering of short-term notes. U. S. Government issues were inactively traded within a small price range.

Sales at noon approximated 1,230,000 shares.

In the third hour setbacks of a point or so were shown by numerous issues. These included New York Central, Westinghouse, Allied Chemical, Auto-Lite, Continental Can, Diamond Match, Columbian Carbon and du Pont.

Gains of a point or so were recorded for Second National Investors and Western Union. U. S. Steel was down a major fraction.

Stocks showed a tendency to sag in the fourth hour with leaders showing losses of a point or so. Rails were the principle targets of the bears and losses in the group were as high as 2 points. Atlantic Coast Line dropped 2 points. Union Pacific and New York Central were down a point or more.

U. S. Steel extended its loss to a point. Issues showing losses of around a point included Air Reduction, Allied Chemical, Case Threshing, American Sugar, Brown Cork & Seal and American Commercial Alcohol.

Domestic Copper Price is Shaded

New York, Jan. 25 (AP) — Domestic copper prices were slightly shaded today. Some custom smelters were quoting 8¾ cents a pound, as compared with recent quotations of 8⅞-8⅞ cents. Failure of the copper producers to agree on a code was held responsible for market quarters for the decline.

Teck Hughes Gold Net Is $725,257

Teck Hughes Gold Mines, Ltd., reports for quarter ended Nov. 30, 1933, net income of $725,257 after taxes, depreciation, etc., equal to 18 cents a share on the 4,807,144 shares of $1 par, against $774,749, or 16 cents a share, on 4,797,144 shares in the quarter ended Nov. 30, 1932.

Trading on London Exchange Is Quiet

London, Jan. 25 — Trading was quiet on the stock exchange here today. Gilt-edged securities and mining stocks were dull, and Argentine issues were firmer, later on crop prospects. The market closed steady. Paris closed mixed and Berlin lower.

American Dollar Higher in London

London, Jan. 25 (AP)—The United States dollar moved steadily to a higher level on a quiet foreign exchange market today and closed 5 cents to the pound dearer at 4.97¾.

Wellesley Financing

Wellesley will receive bids until noon, January 29, for $200,000 tax anticipation notes, dated January 30, $100,000 maturing respectively November 10 and November 17, 1934.

FOURTH DEGREE---By K. S. Daiger

Secret Trap Is Set on First Definite Clue as Trail of Slayer Nears the End

"Really?" said Anderson beginning to laugh. "Well, if you promise that you won't faint on my hands, I'll consider it. If you feel able, drive your own car out the Townson State road tonight. After dark, mind you. Park it in the woods somewhere, a good distance from the house and cut through the country to the first cellar window on the right. It will be unlocked. Give a soft whistle when you drop into the cellar. If you don't you're likely to get a bullet through you. If you're not there hide behind the furnace or in the coal bin. Be certain that you are armed. Under no circumstances are you to make a light, not even a match. Understand? Remember this particularly for one glimmer of light will ruin us."

I nodded in understanding.

And then I saw Anderson do one of those things, so unusual in a police official, one of those tender comprehending things that had endeared him to the hearts of his men.

He walked over to the cot where the burglar Stokes was beginning to revive.

"Right as a trigger, Tim," he said heartily, pretending not to notice the mystification of Dr. Dandy. "It was fine. You told us exactly what you did before, and I'm sure that it was the truth. You gave us our opening, and fact which you didn't mention before and I think that it is going to save your life."

Tim heaved a great sigh of relief.

"Only for a little while, Tim," went on the Inspector, still holding his hand, "for a little while the whole world is going to look mighty black for you. We're going to accuse you of this murder—"

"Accuse me, Cap?" with a little moan.

"Yes, Tim, we've got to accuse you. And we've got to abuse you and make out that we think you are guilty. And let the newspapers say unkind things about you. But that's because we don't want the real murderer to get any idea that he's suspected, you'll play up, won't you?"

"Reckon I'll have to," answered Tim promptly. "If you say so, Cap. You're sure it's all right?"

"I'm not certain, Tim, but I hope it is—and I think it is. Try to trust me for a little while, will you?"

"Cap," said Tim, looking pretty sheepish and coloring, "if I ever get out of this mess, I promise you one thing—I'm going straight, so help me Gawd!"

"That's fine, Tim," said Anderson heartily, leaning over and patting him on the shoulder. "Spoken like a man. And now when all this is over, you come to me and we'll get you a job and see that your friends let you alone!"

FINAL PLANS LAID

I rushed back to the office and wrote three columns concerning the injection of the truth drug. Reynolds drifted in when I had almost finished.

"Don't, Bob," I stopped long enough to say. "I want to talk to you a minute"

Then I sent a copy boy after sandwiches and coffee, for I wasn't taking any chances on being too late for my rendezvous with Anderson.

When the last line had gone up to the press room, I turned to Reynolds who was perched on a neighboring chair and watching me thoughtfully.

"Come close, Bob," I said, with ill-suppressed excitement. "Don't let a breath of this out, will you?"

Then I told him of Anderson's plan for that night.

"Maybe it will," said and maybe we're going to catch the murderer," I finished. "But this is what I want to know: can you keep a couple of men on tonight just in case the big story does break? God, wouldn't it be a scoop!"

"I'll stay myself," exclaimed Reynolds, whose excitement almost equalled mine. "I'll come down at 10 and I'll write all the first part of the story—description of the cellar and all that. At midnight, I'll turn in on the lounge in the dressing room and lie down there for me when you get back."

"Bully!" I said, with real pleasure, for Reynolds before becoming the managing editor of my paper had been the star reporter for several other sheets. He could write the most thrilling and dramatic stories I have ever read.

In spite of all my hurry, it was long after 8 o'clock before I could break away. The shadows of the October evening had closed in and I had a three-quarters of an hour drive before me.

I dug out my old revolver from a bottom drawer. I had never fired it but once, but I took it along. I dusted it off and saw that it was properly loaded.

SNEAKS ALONG ROAD

Then I started my flivver and was off for Townson. I drove rapidly but cautiously, frequently looking back to see if, by any chance, anyone was interested in my movements. For some time I kept a suspicious eye on a large black sedan which kept directly behind me, but at Towson it branched off to the York road while I kept on up into the Dulany Valley.

From this point, I proceeded with even greater care. I dimmed my lights and drove for half a mile, then stopped; drove another half-mile and stopped short around a curve.

At last I was convinced that I was not followed and when I came to a little dirt road leading through the woods in the general direction of the Paige grounds, I ran my car a short distance off the main highway and well up into the bushes. Then I turned off my lights, locked the ignition and all the doors, for I wanted to be sure that I should find it there safe in case we ran into a jam.

This done, I started off as quickly as possible for the house. The road, fortunately, was a fairly wide one, and as long as I stuck to the center, I had little trouble in stumbling along. Ten minutes later, I came out on the brow of a hill overlooking the Paige estate. I could just make out the various buildings looming through the gloom. There was the barn, the outhouses and the big old mansion.

Swiftly and silently, I walked down the hill, skirted around the desolate old mansion, and so at last I came to the first cellar window on the right of Ranny's cottage.

Here I stopped and pulled out my gun, alert for any sound, but there was the silence of the grave. Only far away the mournful chanting of the frogs in the Gunpowder marshes.

Was I the first or the last?

I opened it quietly, gave one last look around, and dropped into the blackness below. Remembering Anderson's caution, I gave one soft whistle, but there was instantly answered by a return whistle.

I looked around, trying to accustom my eyes to the darkness. Then I heard a low voice.

"Bob," it said, "is that you?"

"Carroll," I stammered. "Carroll, did you speak?"

HIDE IN COAL BIN

"Right-o," and I felt a hand on my arm.

"This way," and I felt myself led through the blackness until at last we reached what my friend told me was the coal bin, the floor covered with a small amount of coal.

"Sit down," ordered Carroll, and I dropped on the hard uncomfortable lump, making a terrific din as I did so.

"I thought you were knocked out," I said in bewilderment.

"Nothing else but," answered Carroll, his voice the merest thread of sound in a whisper. "I was pretty hard but not too bad to get out here tonight. Anderson wanted me particularly because I am a dead shot." (This was entirely true. Carroll had been the crack shot on the Cornell University rifle team and later on the New York Gun and Rifle Range and had held the outdoor and indoor championship for several years.)

"What did it, Dickey?" I asked.

Waldorf Vs. the Chefs

"Strike!" yelled the dishwasher.

Oscar jabbed his thumb in the soup and held it up to see which way the wind was blowing.

The gallant 600 paraded around the Waldorf wearing double placards, which proclaimed Oscar was unfair to imported labor.

Then he reached over and clutched me on the arm.

"The window," he whispered. I looked and saw the night outline out a huge shadow outlined against the sky.

The window was opened swiftly and we heard a low whistle.

"The Inspector," said Carroll, and we both gave an answering call.

HOURS OF WAITING

"Is Ray here?" he asked.

"Here, sir," I answered.

"Good!"

"Come have an easy chair," invited Carroll. "This coal is perfectly delightful. One could ask nothing better."

The Inspector laughed gently.

"This is only the start," he said. "Wait and see how it feels after six or seven hours of it!"

Dickey groaned.

Anderson came on into the bin and three himself down.

X-RAY

Examination, consultation and trial treatment absolutely free in all cases of goiter before Jan. 28. The wonderful power of the X-ray to relieve suffering intensely from Lumbago. I applied about three weeks ago a treatment but my condition did not improve. I read Dr. Walsh's article on him treat me, and the Lumbago vanished. I am glad to say Dr. Walsh and he is so well pleased that he has asked me to write a testimonial of my treatment. I make this statement with the hope that it may help others who suffer as I did."

Most of us were soft, all right. But recent evidence indicates that some of the boys were what might be called very hard, indeed.

NATURE STUDY

PARIS.—The new blast of former Premier Herriot in favor of payment by France of its war debts to the United States fell "like a pebble in the ocean," a government spokesman said today.

Says Genevieve, the kitchen cynic: "Main reason the League of Nations is so sick - is that everybody wanted to get something out of it that nobody else wanted to put in."

NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

THURSDAY, JANUARY 25, 1934

LARGEST EVENING CIRCULATION BY MORE THAN 80,000

Death Reaps Terrific Harvest When Nations Sow Seeds of Hatred

"PRIDE, pomp and circumstance of glorious war!"

War is not glorious, though its purpose may be and is when a nation is fighting the invader in defense of its liberties.

Otherwise its pride is the arrogance of the warrior; its pomp the vanity of ambition and its circumstance a fraud; a fraud because its real circumstances are so often censored and suppressed.

War is no sooner declared than a censor is appointed. Often his appointment is in advance of the declaration.

Nothing from the front is released for publication until he has given his consent.

The truth about a war must always wait for general circulation until peace has been signed and the censor relieved of his duties.

In particular is he careful to prevent publication of such photographs as may contradict official reports, or in any way undermine public faith in the genius of the generals.

What the war correspondent says, if it is later found to have been indiscreet, can be "officially" denied, but there is no denying the facts as disclosed by the camera.

Fortunately for the truth as it concerns the American people, the Boston Sunday Advertiser is able to reproduce in its Jan. 28 issue a second series of photographs taken on the spot on foreign soil in what, had we been wiser, would have been a wholly foreign conflict. There will be five pages—a most graphic portrayal of the world horror.

DEAD IN HIS NEST—Came the end of a terrible day. This German machine gunner had blocked the way of the Allied attackers until a direct hit by an American shell stilled the hand that slew only by high command. A shell fragment almost decapitated him. At the left a dead comrade's arm protrudes. This is but one of the exclusive uncensored war pictures to be published next Sunday in the Boston Sunday Advertiser's special section of five full pages, the second in the series from the collection of Floyd Gibbons, famed war correspondent.

They are the pitiless publicity which militarism always seeks to avoid and prevent, but in their brutally faithful realism there are lessons for the American people.

They tell us in the plainest possible language:

(1) To keep out and stay out of foreign conflicts, and out of the entanglements which would lead us into them.

(2) To put ourselves in such position that, come what may, we shall be able to defend every American life and every inch of American soil and protect our land from the devastation of war.

The paramount importance of those two lessons is the sole reason prompting the Sunday Advertiser to publish these pictures. Had such pictures been taken in the earlier days of the war and reproduced in America, there might have been less temptation for this country to take sides in theconflict.

Not that Americans are afraid to fight. Far from it, but because the war would have been stripped of the glamour with which European propagandists sought to invest it, and with all its barbarities revealed they might have thought twice before taking part in an affair that was none of their making.

We were drawn in and TAKEN in; TAKEN and RETAKEN in.

Nor was the end of the war the end of European deception in dealing with America.

Europe was as much the mendicant pleading for American help after as it was during the war.

With every American regiment sent "over there" to help the Allies came another request for more American money and materials. And when American patience was worn out by European begging, and we refused to pour still more funds into the sink of European greed, we were insulted by being told that we had done practically nothing in the way of winning the war.

And when Uncle Sam asked for some payment on account of loans contracted for on solemn promises to pay, he was called "Uncle Shylock."

"Dear Old Uncle Sam" when he was lending; "Old Shylock" when he asked to be paid.

Of such is the gratitude of the defaulter nations with whom it was America's misfortune to have dealings.

But, bitter and costly as is that experience, something of the loss will be liquidated and repaid if, looking upon the pictures to be shown in the Boston Sunday Advertiser on Sunday next, we make the high resolve never again to be drawn into foreign conflicts on foreign soil, or to be drawn into foreign alliances or entanglements.

Foreign entaglements are webs spun by foreign diplomacy.

The nation that "never lost a war and never won a conference" need have no fear if only it keeps out of foreign conferences called in the name of better international understanding, but in reality designed to further purposes fraught with the possibilities of foreign conflicts.

By keeping out of other people's business we shall have more time to concentrate on our own, and the FIRST BUSINESS of America is to be ADEQUATELY prepared to defend America.

The unpreparedness of which the foreigner complained when we were helping him must not become his ADVANTAGE in the event of his aggression against us.

Study the pictures to be published next Sunday, ponder their lessons as to diplomatic, political and economic independence and the adequate defenses of land, sea and air necessary to guarantee that independence.

Aeronautics Bureau Victim Of Political Control

By James T. Williams, Jr.

(This is the eighth of a series of articles on the Aeronautics Bureau of the Department of Commerce, the seventh of which appeared yesterday.)

When Ewing Y. Mitchell of Missouri faces the Congressional investigation of the Department of Commerce, which an outraged public sentiment should soon force, he will have an opportunity to hear what the pilots who fly the colors over land and sea and the mails and the passengers up and down the federal airways think of his qualifications or the office he now holds.

It ought not be difficult for a committee of either house or for a joint committee of the two houses to find witnesses north, east, south and west who are capable of giving expert testimony as to why Mr. Mitchell is where he is and what he has been doing since he got there.

A good beginning might be made by calling to the witness stand Capt. Lewis McBride construction corps, United States Navy, now head of a department in the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis. He was the officer assigned by the Navy Department to the board headed by the late Dwight W. Morrow, which President Coolidge appointed on December 12, 1925, to make a study of the best means of developing and applying aircraft in national defense.

EMINENTLY QUALIFIED

Capt. McBride is eminently qualified to tell an honestly organized bipartisan investigating committee of the legislative branch of the federal government the reasons for the recommendations of the Morrow board, one of which the Congress adopted when it created an assistant secretary of commerce for aeronautics under the Department of Commerce, and made the secretary of commerce responsible, under the law, for the regulation and development of civil aeronautics.

In the light of the testimony which Capt. McBride is so well qualified to give in regard to the aeronautics branch, an investigating committee will then be prepared to sift the qualifications of Mr. Mitchell to perform the duties for which Secretary Roper selected him last summer.

There has been tremendous activity in the aeronautics branch of the Department of Commerce ever since the office created by Congress was abolished long enough to eliminate Mr. Mitchell's predecessor and to change his title to Secretary of Commerce from that of the assistant secretary of commerce for aeronautics.

EXPERT OPINION

Many of these activities have developed ramifications leading into the departments charged with national defense. An investigating committee owes it to the honor of the Congress, as well as to the integrity of the national defense, to compare the recommendations in relation to aeronautics of Secretary Roper and his political assistant from Missouri with the expert opinion of the ablest constructors and engineers the armed forces can place at the disposal of the investigating branch of the government.

By calling among the first witnesses such distinguished defenders with the colors as those just named, an investigating committee will lay firm the foundation for an inquiry that will ultimately "establish justice" and "provide for the common defense" in the aeronautics branch where lesser purposes appear to have been uppermost in the minds of the politicians with whom Secretary Roper and Assistant Secretary Mitchell have surrounded themselves.

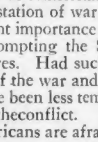
New York Day by Day

NEW YORK, Jan. 25—A glamorous mile to lay under heel these crisp days is that Park Avenue stretch between 40th and 60th at 5 p. m. It is not the Champs Elysees in Spring but the arched and gaudy grids of lights of the Grand Central building provide a vista comparable to the Arc de Triomphe.



The Waldorf tea and cocktail rooms are aglow with laughter and music. So are those of the revived Park Lane, across the way. Sherry's, too, and Theresa Worthington Grant's. Northward the Ritz Tower, Ambassador and Delmonico's add lustre. As do the fashionable Racquet and Union clubs.

Chinchilla, sable and orchids are in profusion and most luxuriously upholstered limousines are on view. Even the olum liveried footman is restored. There are sidewalk smoking debutantes, collegiates, crisp white mustaches and lorgnetted dowagers—like a scene of carnal dominion from an operetta.

Recently, for instance, I saw Fannie Hurst, Katharine Hepburn, Miriam Hopkins, M. H. Aylesworth, James Montgomery Flagg, Paul Muni and Paul Block—all within range of a very few blocks. In such a confusion of grandeur the depression seems entirely lost.

New York no longer has what the theatrical profession knows as "tough galleries." Old Hammerstein's had the saltiest. Excellent performers often got the bird. Nothing could be done. Unless a piff-awmer caught the favor of the upper roost he was a sad spectacle. The second roughest was the Colonial on upper Broadway, a vaudeville house then patronized by lads blazing with gluttery epithets from Hell's kitchen. George Jessel lasted there in early days just one performance. It broke his heart.

* * *

I remember one heartless effort to raze an artist at Hammerstein's. Cruelly enough, Marshall P. Wilder, the dwarfed monologist, was the target. He did not leave the stage. Helplessly, he extended his arms and implored: "Give me five minutes to do my best. If I don't please, hurl the fruit." He gave the performance of his career and wound up in a whirlwind of seven curtain calls.

* * *

It was at Hammerstein's, too, I saw Rube Goldberg give his first performance—a chalk talk. He was lily white and scared stiff as the orchestra chorded an entrance. But he knew the Hammerstein humor and crossing stage with a glance to the gallery, yelled: "Hello, rough necks!" They loved it, and Rube got a big ovation.

I've been entertaining two nine-year-old hopefuls for the evening and am I fit to be tied! At a movie both loat their gloves and on the way home, having no sense, I permitted them to have two ice cream sodas each and right away they became sicker than all get out. And if you ever acquire a sudden notion to make yourself conspicuous I know the dandiest way. Just try to walk two sick little boys along a crowded New York street. Taxicabs I hailed would veer in, take one look and swerve away.

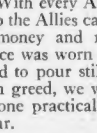
Listen World!

By Elsie Robinson

ALWAYS about this time of year I get The Blues. Not just regular blues—but a regular mountain of Melancholy Mopes.

Usually it begins with a gold id da head. Then I get to looking over my Jan. 1 bills. Next I start to thinking of what a Cock-eyed Idiot I made of myself last year — and all the other 49. With that. I abandon all control and decide to do - a - walk-out - for - wassa-use - of - going-anyway - whenlife's - such - a-flop?



Elsie Robinson

Sounds familiar, doesn't it? Get that way yourself most every January, don't you, old dear? So what?

For a good many years I couldn't dope out "so what?" Life seemed permanently at an end, and that was that. Why linger on? Then one year I hit on a scheme that has worked fine ever since. Not that it prevents the Melancholy Mopes entirely. But it gives me a toe-hold on the future—and you can stand anything today if you can hope for a better break tomorrow.

What's the scheme? When the Midwinter Blues hit me now, I go out and look at some ground. What kind of ground? Any kind of ground, for they all pack the same wallop. Real country, if I can reach it. If I can't—any vacant lot, or back yard, or strip of dirt along the sidewalk.

I look at that ground. I think what an amazing thing it is. How old it is. How many things have happened to it since the world began. It has been flooded and frozen, burnt and blighted by pests. It has been drenched with blood and tears. It has been befouled with rubbish, trampled underfoot and its rich crop left in ruins. It has often lain waste for hundreds of years. And now it's black and bleak with winter cold—

BUT IN A FEW WEEKS THAT SOIL WILL BE BEARING AGAIN!

In spite of everything—in spite of all its frustrations and failures, its hurts and humiliations—that soil will be bearing again with the spring. There'll be grass sprouting —gay gypsy weeds—perhaps lovely flowers and fine fruits.

And why?

Not because the soil, itself, has invited them. Nor even because man has planted them. BUT BECAUSE LIFE WANTS THEM, WILLS THEM — AND YOU CAN ALWAYS BET ON LIFE.

You can always bet on life to keep going on, no matter how great the depression, how cruel the handicap, how long the delay. Sooner or later, the Old Gal will always get on the job again and start things moving.

You can always bet on Life, That's why this earth has lasted. Men would have given up long ago, but Life has never given up. No matter, how bleak the winter. Life comes back again with the spring—and there's a new crop growing over last year's grave.

So don't give up now! Don't say, "I've done everything I can, and it's no use; I'm through!"

There's something yet that hasn't been done—there's something yet that isn't through—and that's Life!

Human Side of the News; Passing of Real West

By Edwin C. Hill

The old-time cattle business is gone; the great ranches, with few exceptions, have broken up, surrendering to civilization. But it was a part of our national history which is unforgettable. Hundred stout-hearted men and courageous women. One sometimes wonders what the American West has gained that really takes its place.

To glance back is like gazing at a mighty panorama. The Overland Trail and the Oregon Trail. A great empire in the making. The prairies black with buffalo as far as the eye could see in any direction. The ceaseless tide of immigrants everlastingly moving toward the setting sun, toward liberty and new opportunity, toward the golden lure of California. The Red Indians, sensing the loss of their lands and the destruction of their tribes, fighting as heroically as a native people ever fought in the hopeless struggle against the resistless tide that had set in against them.

Ben Holladay and his Overland stage lines, running the greatest transportation system that man ever organized and set in motion, with the great Conestoga wagons, built in Concord, N. H., pounding across the prairies, fording streams, climbing mountains, carrying the mail from New York to San Francisco in 28 days, driven by the best men that ever cracked a whip across the stubborn ears of a tormenting mule.

But most appealing of all, most romantic of all, the Pony Express riders, swarming across the continent on their speedy ponies, through snow and blizzard, through the burning heat of the desert, through hostile Indians. With them, as with the air mail flyers of this day, there was only one motto: The United States mails must go forward.

Never before or since has the mail been carried so fast and so far, by horses.

The Pony Express Riders flashed across the prairies and through the mountain passes, from St. Joe, Mo., to Sacramento, Calif., carrying Lincoln's first inaugural message in seven days and 17 hours. There were 80 riders and 190 stations, crowded down the throat of the wilderness, 65 to 100 miles apart.

The Pony Express employed 500 of the fastest horses that could be found, lightning-fast thoroughbreds, many of them, from the Kentucky Bluegrass. The riders were picked men, slim, hard and lithe, made of steel and whipcord. They had just two minutes at every station to change horses and mails. The most famous of all of them was William F. Cody, "Buffalo Bill," who set a record that was never approached.

Years ago, when this writer used to see Colonel Cody riding into the arena of Madison Square Garden on his great golden horse, the Old Indian fighter sitting as straight as an arrow for all of his seventy-odd years, his white hair tumbling on his shoulders and his snow-white mustache and goatee, I thought not as much of the single-handed duel he had with Yellow Hand, the Cheyenne Chief, as of the time he rode the Pony Express 384 miles, "without one stop except to change horses and swallow one hasty meal."

When they built the overland telegraph line in 1861, the brief but glorious career of the Pony Express came to an end, and then the coming of the Iron Horse and the transcontinental railroad brought the doom of Ben Holladay's Overland stage lines.
